no need for Maplin airport

By Arthur Reed Air Correspondent

In its report to the Govern-ment on Maplin the committee appointed to look into the future or the third London airport recommends that there is no need to go ahead with the £800m project. The recommendation will he eagerly seized upon by most of the Cabinet, with the result that the third airport project may now be considered dead.

The committee, which is still writing its raport, will give three main reasons why the project is not now as necessary as when the Roskill commission reported four years ago.

1. Expansion of air services has come to a virtual standstill because of higher fares, introduced after the Arab-Israel war of last October led to fuel price rises.

2. Worldwide inflation is adding to the disneimation of the public to travel

3. Larger airliners carrying more people are taking the strain off airport runways and terminal buildings to a degree unsuspected when the Roskill report was written.

The report, which will he presented to Parliament in the form of a Green Paper early next month, will point out that there is a trend mwards larger air-is a trend towards larger air-liners and that technological advances, such as quieter eogines, will make it easier for existing airports to accommodate traffic in the future.

The report agrees with Lahour thinking on the third airport. In its manifesto for the February election, the party indicated that it would cancel Maplin on environmental grounds.

After the election, one of the After the election, one of the Labour Government's first ections was to order a halt to all preparatory work on the Maplin project. It set op a committee of civil servants to look into the third airport question and it is that body ther is now writing its report. ther is now writing its report. It bas called on the know-ledge of a wide range of eviation and economic experts, and as e result of their evidence has come to the conclusion that it will not be necessary to open the first runway at Maplin by 1981, as bad been planned.

The British Airports Authority told the committee it would be able to cope with the increase of traffic at existing major airports in the South-east until 1985. If permission is given to develop new terminals at the existing airports, they should be able to meet demand until 1990.

After that, o third London airport might be necessary, but in aviation terms the date is a lifetime away and impossible to plan.

Onerous task facing Mr Whitelaw as Tories' new chairman

Political Staff

The new chairman of the Conservative Party is Mr William Whitelaw, who will give up his duties as shadow Secretary for Employment, although he remains in the Shadow Cahinet. The announcement that Lord Carrington bad tendered his resignation after two years as chairman, together with a similar move hy Mr James Prior, deputy chairman, came as no surprise to MPs at Westminster last night.

It had been expected for some days that the onerous task of reshaping the Conservative image in time for the next election would fall on the hroad shoulders of Mr Whitelaw. Like Lord Carrington and Mr Prior, he is a totally committed Heath man, although during the four years of the Conservative Administration it was rumoured that he had the occasional contretemps with his Prime Minister, his hluff and frank way of talking heing not always to the liking of Mr Heath.

The advantages of arriving in a Mercedes:

Before we look at any of the other advantages, the first fact is you've a better chance of arriving at all.

Because one thing all the experts will agree is that Metcedes Benz are just about the safest cars on the roads

As the Guardian motoring correspondent put it: 'Any valuable executives involved in a car crash in the 'S' class have a better chance of walking away from the wreckage than in any other luxury saloon in Europe today.'

Even so you're probably not going to buy a Mercedes for safety alone.

So what else have we to offer?

You arrive in comfort.

Obviously there are a lot of things we could say about comfort in a Mercedes Benz.

But let's just take the seats as an example. Because a lot of people's first reaction to them is they're hard.

Well, how long is it since anyone recommended

Mercedes Benz seats are firm, in fact orthopaedically designed to give your body the support it needs.

So that even after a 300 mile journey you're still ready for more.

So that even after a London jam you'll still be able to find your feet.

As the Times correspondent, recently traffic-bound for 2% hours, simply said:

'It was a tribute to the comfort of the 230.4 that the ordeal was not as frustrating as it might have been.

You arrive on time.

Let's be quite honest, on today's crowded and restricted roads, a tremendously high top speed is no longer

What you need now is a car with a flexible performance—the kind that's just as happy on the North Circular as it is cruising up the Ml.

The kind that won't let you down in the wet.

Won't swerve you out of line when you brake. Won't hesitate when you put your foot down to accelerate.

Or as Car recently said of the 280E, makes it impossible to induce a situation where the car behaves unpredictably, regardless of surface or speed.

With the result that you can almost unintentionally put in very high average speeds.

And when you think about it, isn't that, today, what you really want?

You arrive feeling fit for business.

You know how it is when you have to drive anywhere to keep an appointment:

A slog up the motorway is never going to help your pitch for that multi-million pound contract.

A battle through the city will hardly help towards a relaxed new business presentation.

So it's perhaps as well to know that everything in a Mercedes-Benz is designed to prevent you feeling tense, strained and fraught

In short, to make driving as effortless as it can be.
And who knows, maybe even relaxed enough for you to solve a few of your company's problems on the way.

You arrive with a subject of conversation.

Naturally levels of interest in the car will vary.

The more technically-minded might like to hear about your 450's starting torque compensation, for instance. (Under heavy acceleration it actually prevents rear end squat.)

But more than likely they'll simply be interested in the washers and wipers you've got on your SLC's headlights.

Or your standard central locking system. (Watch as you turn that key. They'll all want to know if all the doors, the boot and petrol cap really have locked at Whatever everyone chooses to talk about, though, one thing's for certain—they will talk.

And whenever people do that, you can always be sure of one other thing too:

Everyone knows you've arrived.

Too many business premises are chosen on the wrong business premise.

A man, competent in his own business, often presumes to be as competent in the property business.

Unfortunately without expert advice, buying new offices, shops, warehouses or factories can be full of pitfalls.

Iceland's 1100-year-old saga told in silver coins. * A strictly limited issue * Reverse

The Central Bank of the Republic of Iceland has announced the special issue of legal tender silver proof coins. This new currency forms part of the celebrations marking the eleven hundredth anniversary of Iceland's settlement in the year 874.

The coins. This celebratory set, struck at the Royal Mint, consists of the following silver coins:

- 500 kronur 925 std silver proof coin, 35 mm weighing 20 grams.
- 1,000 kronur 925 std silver proof coin, 39 mm weighing 30 grams.

These silver coins offered as a pair at £16.00°. Strictly limited issue. 50,000 sets only of the silver proof coins are being issued and collectors are therefore advised to send their orders without delay.

The designs. The theme of the designs is a fascinating blend of history and tradition - a reminder that the men and women whe voyaged to Iceland eleven centuries ago were a strange mixture of the practical and the superstitious. The coins are shown here in their actual sizes.

The 1,000 kr silver coin. The abverse, like its 500 kr companion coin, shows hew the earliest settlers limited the amount of land they could appropriate. In this case it is the men, who lit 2 fire at sunrise, walked all day, and lit another fire at sunset. The fites marked the outer limits of their land.

The 500 kr silver coin. The obverse illustrates 2 woman leading a two-year-old heifer. The area she could walk round with the heifer between sunrise and sunset en one spring day defined the amount of land she could appropriate for herself.

The reverse design in both cases is of Iceland's land spirits - a bull, a bird, a dragon and a giant - which in Icelandic mythelogy, protected the country from Hospital doctors gave a clear warning yesterday that, failing an improvement in thair pay and speedy agreement on a new contract for senior staff, sanc-tions would be used to achieve their aims.

Proper approach to loss of future earnings

Smith v Manchester City Council Before Lord Justice Edmund Davies, Lord Justice Stamp and Lord Justice Scarman [Judgmeots delivered June 10]

In making an award for loss of future earnings in an action by a domestir worker injured at work but whose earnings were the same as before the accident the tourt had to take into account her weakened position to the labour market in the event of her losing her present in the the event of her losing her present job.

The Court of Appeal allowed an appeal by Mrs Gladys Smith, aged 51. of Gorton, Manchester, and increased to £3.000 at award of £2.300 damages made by Mr Justice Kilner Brown at Manchester that October against her, employers, Manchester City, Council. The judge's sward of £300 for possible loss of future earnings was increased by £700. His award of £2,000 for pain and suffering was unrhanged.

E2,000 for pain and suffering was unrhanged.

Mr George Carman, QC, and Mr Peter Clegg for Mrs Smith; Mr A. Logan Petch for the council.

LORD JUSTICE EDMUND DAVIES said that Mr Garman attacked the E2.000 for pain and suffering and less of amenity as too little and the £300 for possible loss of future earnings as decisory.

The council in 1966 employed Mrs Smith as a part-time rheamer at an eventide home. In May, 1971, she slipped and tell, landing on her right elbow. She sustained a fracture of the bead of the right radius, which involved the elbow joint itself. She was off work for 14 months but had been working for two mooths before the trial. The council had given an undertaking that provided she was conscientious and well behaved they would routinue to employ her. Because her arm had been strapped up for a of movement in the elbow joint.

The jodge indicated that her capacity for work had been cut. down and her enjoyment of life interfered with. Although he had doubts about the alleged degree of uselessness of her right arm, he accepted that she was considerably disabled. His Lordship, however, did nor consider that £2,000 was so far out of the proper hracket that the court ought to interfere.

There remained the £300 for

There remained the £300 for future financial loss. Mrs Smith earned £16.50 for a 35-hour week. earned £16.50 for a 36-hour week. In spite of the council's undertaking they might find themselves unable to continue to employ her. She berself might find working at the eventide home no longer possible. She was anchored to her present job. She could not just walk out how the open labour market with all its competition and stand anything like the chance of fresh employment the world have stand anything like the chance of fresh employment she would have had if she had not been injured, and that was brought out in the medical reports. Even though there was no present financial loss, one had to look into the future and Mrs Smith was earning £850 a year and could, if fit, keep on working mult she was 65, for another 14 years. The award of £300 amounted to about four mouths' wages. The award called for interference. His Lordship would allow the appeal in relesion in the £300 and increase it to £1000.

His Lordship would add a post-script. The result of the indigment was that Mirs Smith's damages went up by £700. He doubted whether he would baye been a party to such an award five years ago. He would then have been inclined to say that a mere increase of £700 on £2,300 would not mean that the trial judge's award was manifestly erroneous. But now circumstances were entirely changed.

Formerly the Cours of Appeal had held that there were no grounds for sub-dividing awards of damages for personal injuries: Warson v Pountes [[1968] 1 QB 596) and in Povey v Jackson ([1970] 1 WLR 969) the court had held that although the general damages awarded were on the low side and the special damages on the high side and each award would require adjustment had it been the only head of claim, the global sum was fair. But now that assessment of general damages was required to be divided into general damages for pain and suffering and loss of amenities and future financial loss those two matters had to be considered separately. The result was that if the gward under one head was clearly wrong it should be interfered with, even though there might be no substantial variation in the global award. To substitute £1,000 for £300 was a substantial edjustment, and their Lordships should not be hampered by the old approach from doing Justice.

LORD JUSTICE SCARMAN, also agreeing, said that the Judge's

The words and ambit of the Act were wide. Flatcher v Sledmore ([1973] RTR 371) indicated the court's attitude to a suggestion made from time to time that the clear statutory language should be restricted on the assumed basis that Parliament must so bate lotended.

Such a submission had been made and upheld in Hall v Wickens Motors (Gloucester) Led ([1972] 1 WIR 1418]. The value of that case was that it emphasized that the Act was only concerned with lake trade descriptions applied to goods in secretarion. With a compare in association with a countract of sale or supply of goods. ## calls for countryside ' inquiry

By John Young Planning Reporter

A new inquiry into the future of the countryside of Britain is called for in the annual report of the Countryside Commission, published yesterday.

It says that although the boundaries between town and country was becoming blurred. the country eovironment was still little understood by most townspeople.

"If rural areas are to continue to provide for increasing numbers the enjoyment and recreation so patently expected from them, a coordinated and well understood countryside policy is essential."

Introducing the report, Mr John Cripps, chairman of the commission, gave a reminder that more people look to the countryside to produce food than to serve any other single purpose. Food production was, and might more emphatically become the nation's first requirement of the countryside.

The report describes as "major setbacks" the decisions to improve the A66 road through the Lake District and the refusal to designate the Cambrian mountains in Wales as a national park.

The commission considers that the road plans could not be justified solely by the needs of local and or touring traffic. If heavy traffic were rerouted, the remainder would hardly justify improvements on the scale en-visaged. "We conclude that the department got their priori-ties disastrously wrong ".

With reference to the proposed park, the commission says that the provision of country parks, car parks and picnic sites, suggested as an alternative, would oot alone secure for the area and its residents the protection and financial henefits that would be a followed the that would have followed the creation of the national park.

The report gives general approval to the Channel tunnel, since the commission was not convinced that building it would be more destructive than not

Plans are going ahead to designate 10 further areas of outstanding natural beauty. They are an additional stretch of the Northumberland coast, part of the north Pennines, the Nidderdale moors in Yorkshire, Clwydian and Berwyn moun-tains in North Wales, Box Valley in Suffolk, High Weald of Sussex and Kent, Rame Head and Camel estuary in Cornwall, and the Isles of Scilly. This year, if you want a Beta 1800, you'll have to think a bit harder about it. because there are now two to choose

The new addition is called the Beta 1800 ES.

ES stands for Equipaggiamento Speciale. Which means that it has some special features which put it in a luxury class, ahead even of the standard Beta.

For the sun-lover we've installed an integral steel sliding roof with a special one-handed, easy opening mechanism. The frame is formed in manufacture to retain the strength of the roof and body structure.

Then there are the electricallyoperated front and rear windows, controlled from a console between the front seats, and the all-round tinted glass with special shading at the top of the windscreen.

Finally, we've fitted distinctive light alloy wheels which give a finishing touch to the Beta's elegant body.

Of course, you still get all the features which make the standard Beta so impressive. Such as fully-reclining seats with adjustable head restraints, two-speed wipers, electrically heated rear window, extensive rustproofing and under body sealing, independently adjustable front and rear heating and ventilation and self-levelling low beam headlights.

And, most importantly, you get the impressive Beta fuel economy.

In a factory test, driving the car at constant speed with two people on board, the Beta returned 44.8 mpg at 37 mph and 29.4 mpg at 75 mph.

So that's the Beta 1800 ES in a nutshell. Now all you have to do is choose.

She would like to model this on a scheme ruo by the Griffin Society, whereby prisoners from all the women'e jails can meet their children for informal half day visits at the and was allowed a normal 30-minute husband was released. "It was a traumatic experience. The first time she saw him in bed with me she screamed and screamed. She didn't know him at all. She couldn't understand why he was living society's hostel in Camden Town.

Mr Douglas Curtis, London and south east regional organizer of NACRO (National Association for the Cara and Rasettlement of Offenders) is very much in favour of visitors' centres. "So many people have to speed hours hanging around waiting for their visit, in the road, or at the station, getting cold, with their children crying, that some of them simply can't cope, so revery wisit on all?" never visit at all."

There are now centras attached to 16 of the 80-odd jails in the country, and probation committees are heing encouraged to spend more money on visiting. But Mr Curtis feels that there are other, more important factors than aleeping together or playing for two days with the children that will keep a marriage going. "The whole business of prisoners' pay is crucial. mai people who can't see any other way of keeping families together", says Mrs. Margaret Tuttie, an ex-beauty queen, from Islington, whose husband is now serving 18 years for armed robbery, and who founded the union from her home last If wives are on soctal security, the man loses all authority. Why not pay him the proper rate for the joh he does inside, and give him some status?"

And be, too, is pessimistic about the future of proper family centres inside jails. "Conjugal visits raise a lor of problems in people's miods. What about the morality of them? What about men who have girl friends? What about security?" security?

And yet very keen support for family centres comes from an unexpected source. Mr Percy Rossell, Chief Probation Officer for Hampshire, and a long-time campaigner for improving prison visiting conditions, says he cannot see the objections to them. "Centres could be built oo to the prison walls. There wouldn't be a contract of the prison walls. security risk: no one would mind being searched. You want to rehebilitate prisocers, not descroy them.

Mr Russell is responsible for setting up a house on the Isle of Wight where wives with husbands in Albany, Camp Hill and Parkhurst can spend four days at a time and be granted en extra amount of visiting time each day. "Io this way families can't just have that same convarsation about facts over and over again that they have with normal visits hut have to get down to real conversations about them-

Whereas the child with frequent coughs and colds often does not have a serious prob-lem, the child with earache usually has. I am often con-cerned by the manner in which a mother describes her child's "runny ear"—almost as though it is one of the natural accompaniments of childhood. The only discharge from the ear which is not serious is that due to wax but this is orange or brown and less runny than the yellowish watery discharge of pus. Wax is formed in the ear passage in order to keep it clean and free from dust. It flows naturally to the outside flows naturally to the outside where any excess can he wiped away during bathing. Cleaning out the ear with cotton wool is onnecessary and has the additional disadvantage that it may encourage the child to poke other things into his ear.

The most common reason for earache is inflammation of the middle ear (otitis media). This part of the ear houses the delicate lever system immediately heyond the eardrum. Inflammation of the muter ear—the pastion of the muter ear—the pastion of the muter ear—the pastion in myringotomy, an operation in sage leading down to the drum -is another cause of earache. Pain in the ear can also result from inflammation of the throat alone. This is the result of referred pain through a common pathway for the nerves from the two sites. It accounts for the severe pain which may he felt in the ears immediately efter removal of the tonsils.

The decision as to which of thesa three is the cause of the earache requires an examinatioo of the ears and throat. Inflammation of the outer ear causes acute pain when the ear itself is moved, ao lying on the ear is painful. To reduce the risk of further attacks of oritis media, the surgeon may decide to remove the adenoids. These are similar to the tonsils in that they are composed of lymphoid tissue which protects against infection. However, since they are loceted at the back of the throat just above the uvula, they differ from the tonsils in that they cannot be aeen through the mouth without the use of a special instrument. When they enlarge they block the Eustachian tubes; these lead eer in order to keep the air pressure equal on both sides of the

It is because of the shape of the Eustachian tubes that otitis media is more common in young children than in adults. ## A woman's life on the local council

Local politics may not, on the face of it, seem to be an especially glamorous, exciting or even rewarding joh for a woman. In fact, many of my friends thought it rather odd when a fairly radical-thinking outsider like myself decided to take the plunge.

Yet after only one year as a district councillor, I would categorically say it is one of tha most underestimated areas where a woman can make an impact opoo, and a broad contribution to, her community. What is more it is a fabulous, untapped area where so many needed grass-roots reforms can be spearheaded.

True, it bas a tarnished image at present with the public convinced it is either peopled by elderly buffoons in archaic mayoral chains or shady sorts eagerly on the take. All the more reason why I felt the younger, more ordinary ex-career woman or housewife should get more involved. She is, after all, for at least 15 even 20 years of bar life concerned fundamentally with the community on a bare-necessity basis, while her busband is off and necessity dasis, while her dustand is off and away at business. It is she who has to worry whether the dustman will show up; whether the school is doing its job; whether her children need a pedestrian crossing or even a traffic light at the corner for safe travel; bow to rid the area of integer arms. of juggernauts; why her council cannot build a swimming pool like the oew one in her friend's area; whether they really can't avoid a warehouse on that lot at the end of the garden; and so on.

Who better theo the bousewife to appreciate the subtleties of some of the policy decisions taken by a housing educa-tion or even a recreational amenities committea? How often have I seen small yet vital points brought to a committee's attention by a woman who bas quite obviously had to deal with such a matter time and again. Is even the most astute businessman as closely attuned to these domestic-type situations? After all, local politics and local government are very domestic.

Turning point in world game as Sir Stanley Rous goes

From Geoffrey Green Football Correspondent Frankfurt, June 11

England is not in the World Cup and Sir Stanley Rous is no lunger president of the Federation Internationale de Football Association (FIFA). The wind has veered end the balance of nower of world football has shifted from the old world to the new.

At the 39th congress of the federation in orogress here, Sir Stanley, president since 1962, was today voted out of office and Jean Havelange, of Brazil, now takes his place at the summit of the proceedings. When the result was announced by Or Helmut Kaser, of Switterland, the FIFA general secretary, Havelange, advanced to the dais and kissed Sir Stanley on both cheeks. Sir Stanley was then thanked warmly by Valentin Granatkin, of the Soviet Union, senior vice-president, for all the work he had done for FIFA over the years. When Sir Stanley and two long-serving culleagues were given a standing ovation and then presented with flowers, the furmer president said to the packed assembly: "Their's are bnuquets. Mine is in the nature of a wreath. When the result was announced line is in the nature of a wreath. But I hope FIFA will cootinue to flourish during the new president's term of office." It was done with the simple dignity of a big man who has bestrode the world game for so lone.

After failing to gain the required two-thirds majority at the first hallot (62 votes to 56, with four papers invalid) Havelange then won the position on a straight vote by £8 to 52 with Sir Stanley losing further ground. It may yet prove a turning point in the bis-tory of the game. For better or for worse, only time will tell. for worse, only time will tell.

It was a crowded scene of dramatic undertones—the nations' delegates ranged in the body of the ball; the gallery, a smoky amalgam of the world's press, radio and television. Like some gathering of the United Nations, each wore earphones plugged in for instantaneous translations of the proceedings:

Afterwards, to the British press present, he added: "I've still got a lot of work to do. It will be difficult to administer the game in the future. The trends in modern the future. ## Bold declaration brings England win match.

With 15.5 overs to spare England howled India out at Old Trafford vesterday and so won the first Test match. It was only their second match. It was only their second victory over India at the last nice attempts and it was made possible hy a sensibly build declaration by Denness. Rather than hatting on in the morning he gambled that India would find the task of making 296 to win in six hours' play beyond them.

In the event India, as is their nature, were primarily concerned with not losing. Considering how well the pitch played—hering been uncovered since six o'clock in the morning it had quite dried out from its soaking of Monday eventure. India could have afforded from its soaking of Monday even-ing—India Coold have afforded to make a more forthright effort to get the runs. They may not have a better chance than this in all the series. If victury comes all well and good, but let's make sure of the draw first: that was their philosophy, and it means that the imitative was more or less always with England.

with England.

The two main atombling blocks were Gevaskar and Viswanath. This was a notable match for the small men, these two being India'e most successful batsmen, and Edrich and Fletcher getting hundreds for England. Yesterday Gevaskar batted for almost three hours. Viswanath for three bours 20 minutes. To all intents and purposes the end came when Viswanath was caught et the wicket down the leg side off Old, in the second over of the last twenty. Denness, too, came out of the dey with another feather in his cap. There was only one captain on the field yesterday. Now and again Denness called upon the advice of Knutt or Fletcher or Greig, as he should, and he gave Greig plenty of howling this time. On no fewer than four occasions a bowler took a wicket in the first over of e new spell. With victories in his last two Test matches—here and in West Indies—Denness will take some shifting now. ## An unrealistic declaration irks Surrey supporters

THE OVAL : Surrey (6 pts) drew with Yorkshire (5 pts).

There had been a time before and after luncheon yesterday when the possibility of a celebration in the possibility of a celebration in Surrey's camp had made the briefest appearance on the horizon. This was when Arnold and Pocock, both of, whom had bowled beautifully, had shared six wickets, and when 20 minutes into the efter, noon's first session Yorkshire's score stood at 150, e lead of 105 years. But under a warm and the seemed to know where to place his field. At one rine, when Sdmar-set needed less than one run a ball, every man was set back to save the four. Catches were missed, throws were wild. When Burgess was bowled, 224 for 5, in the 10th over of the last 20. Kem still in theory had a chance, but Close was now in total moral command, and finished the match with e casual six, and seven balls left. runs. But under a warm sun the pirch had lost its lethargy, and affording no edvantage to the bowlers. Ydrishire could and did pace themselves, and when they felt inclined, applied the brake. So, as the minutes dissolved and as ones, twos, threes and an occa-sional four added to Yorkshire's pile of rims, the issue became firmly hinged on the philosophy of Yorkshire's acting captain, Sharpe. The likelihood of his daring to make his declaration inviting, or even interesting, lessened as a femiliar format began to take femiliar format of Surrey's members became restless. In unison, and possibly reassuring themselves, they delivered their verdict: "Disgraceful Yorkshire, e disgrace." Was it then e disgrace?

Well, the fact is that Sharpe called in Carrick and Cope who called in Carrick and Cope who had been enjoying pottering around for Yorkshire's eighth wicket, at 4.10, when the score stood at 263. This meant that Surrey had been asked to make 219 runs to win in 90 minutes, or, pur the other way, 30 minutes and the minimum 20 overs in the last hour. Put aoother way Surrey had to make their runs at seven an over. Surrey's three gentlemen members may have been prejudiced, but to have said." Intendiction would certainly have been true.

Surrey answered subtly by sending in Pocock to partner Edwards;

There should be every excuse if the racing between Epsom and Royal Ascot were a mile duil, but this is certainly not the case at

A year ago this race was won by Habat, who went on to win the Norfolk Stakes, at Royal Ascot eight days later. In due course Habat also won the Mill Reef Stakes at Newbury and the Middle Park Stakes at Newbury and the Middle Park Stakes at Newmarket. His trainer, Peter Walwyn, is now relying upon Red Cross, a most attractive coft by Crepello out of Red Velvet, who was good enough to simsh second in Yellow God's Imperial Stakes. If Red Cross wins well this afternoon, he is likely to turn out for the Chesham Stakes.

Red Cross has clearly inherited speed from both his purents; some tend to forget that Crepello only just failed to win the Windsor Castle Stakes at Royal Ascot on his first appearance on a racecourse and that he was always considered to be a fast horse by Noel Muriess,

itself when she rode her grey

Anthony Newbery, fresh from his triumphs at the Royal Cornwall

final and, drawn first on Sunffles, was clear again in n steady 39-78ec. George Peter-Hoblyn aimed for his first trehle at Lingfield Park yesterday and hlamed the weather that he returned home to Manton with only one winner, Balimar, and two seconds, Carpetmonger and Calkin. "If it had rained overnight, I would have hrought It off ", he lamented.

Carpetmonger was certainly in convenienced by the fast ground in the Nappers Selling Plate. On the other hand, the winner. Young Aler, was taking a steep descent in class, and, leading from start to finish, romped in by four lengths.

The heavyweight class, nine strong, was the hest of the day. The original line-up was headed by Ruth McMullen on the Aldershot winner. Boothby's Heir. followed hy David Tatlow, on Slaney Town, and Mr Crow's Fair Spark. It was surprising to see Juck Gittins down in fifth place on Selsey Bill, unbeaten all season in the heavyweight classes. But the order underweight classes, But the order under-went a rudical change after the horses had been ridden, and eventually Selsey Bill went up into second place, tasting his first de-feat by Fair Spark, who went on to take the championship.

Flintham previously visited France when he ran in the Prix Maurice de Gheest at Deauville last year, and on that occasion, deadheated for fourth place just over two lengths hehind El Rastro at weight for age.

Flintham's most dangerous rival could easily he Cap Arcona. In the Prix de Ris-Orangis at Evry on May 1, El Rastro defented Cap Arcona by the same distance by which he beat Flintham at Newbury. Flintham and Cap Arcona meet at level weights tomorrow and I expect the finish to be closely contested by these two with El Toro in third place.

Mr Crow's final victory came in the foor-year-old class, when Ghil-lie, who won so many champion-ships as a led horse, made an impressive uppearance under seadule to head the new season. young entry.

Mrs Castle outlines measures to help staff burdened with changes in pension arrangements

MRS BARBARA CASTLE, Secrement of State for Social Serv-ices (Blackburn, Lah), made a statement about the settlement of the staff dispute in her depart-

The House knows (she said) that the preparatory work required to be done in local and central offices of my department to ensure the payment of increases in retirement pensions and other social security nenetits by July 22, as announced in the Budget, has as announced in the budget, has been delayed by a dispute involving stuff associations representing the staff of those offices. This matter has now, happily, been cartial.

The CPSA, representing the clerical grades, reached agreement with my department yesterday; the Society of Civil Setvants, presenting the executive grades, presenting the executive grades, ad done so, and had removed leir ban on overtime, on May 28, have myself met representatives both associations on a number occasions during the negotia-

The dispute derived from the Government's endert to carry out their efection pledge to increase benefits at the earliest possible date and the conviction of the DHSS staff associations that the shortened programme proposed for doing so would require a considerable extra effort of their members in local offices, which effort, they claimed, should be recognized by the offer of some form of incentive.

The staff associations have contended throughout the dispute that soccessive governments have tended to place increasing burdens tended to place increasing burdens on their members as e result of changes in social policy without making sufficient provision to enable them to discharge those tasks without excessive overtime or strain. In perticular, relationships with staff in my department have worsened in the past three rears, partly because of attempts by the previous Government, later rears, partly because of attempts by the previous Government, later ghandoned, to hold down necessing increases in staff numbers; and partly tecause of strong feeling about the rigidity of Phases One and Two of the Pay Codenthoogh this of course affected the whole Civil Service.

SIR GEOPPREY HOWE LEAST Surrey, C)—We welcome the set-tlement of this protracted dispute. tiement of this protracted dispute, but we cannot accept that Mrs Castle is right to buy the blame for the underlying grievances ou circumstances arising under the previous Government when she acknowledges that the anomalies have been corrected and when she told the House on March 28 that in deciding oo an early upgrading she was taking a calculated risk and the responsibility would not be with the staff but on her. The House eppreciates the substantial burden of work and responsibility which lies upon the staff of her department.

burden of work and responsibility which less upon the staff of her department.

MRS CASTLE—I would not expect Sir G. Howe to accept any share of responsibility for the low state of morale in my department among my staff. Nevertheless, instory is history and facts are facts.

I welcome the fact that he recognizes, unlike The Times newspaper in e disgraceful leader last weekend, that the staff in my department discharge hard, onerous and responsible tasks, and I said when I amounted the upgrading that I was conscious of the extra burdens I was putting on them. I ask the House to unite in paying tribute to the work of the staff and to express the hope that we can go ahead with uprating with all possible speed.

We have agreed to 500 additional staff, to improve the complement in local offices, and we are working on improvements in the carefer's structure.

I have accepted from the outset the expressions of willingness by the staff associations, given proper recognition of what was being required of those employed in local offices, to encourage their members to do their utmost to put through the benefit increases by July 22.

I know that this House will have been pleased to read in this morning's papers that such encouragement bas been forthcoming.

NED TANKE SCOTT HOPKIN

MR JAMES SCOTT-HOPKINS (UK, West Derbyshire, C) said he hoped Sir C. Soames would take advantage of his visit to make firm proposals to the Council of Ministers on sheep meet. How was that likely to affect New Zealand producers and consumers not only in the United Kingdom?

SIR C. SOAMES said that Mr. Lardinois, Commissioner for Agriculture, would be responsible for bringing forward a sheep meat regulation and be knew that Mr. Lardinois intended to do so. ## would be in the interests of Europe

MR CALLAGHAN, Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Cardiff, South-East, Lab), opening a debate on Europe, said it was important that ahead he should be sustained at east by most of the House : by a critical House but, he also hoped, by an informed House.

There were to be more debarer both about the re-negotiation itself and about EEC progress in general. There was to be a slot at question time, starting on June 26, when it would be possible specifically to address questions to ministers on this matter. He had assumed responsibility or amouncing the forthcoming susiness of the Community and commission in the mount ahead. The Government intended produce six-monthly reports ffairs inside the Comm

The Scrutiny Committee contained a number of doughty warriors on both sides of this issue who would be acrutinizing the affairs of the Community. will in one course received in upon us.

When the Government received texts from the Commission of its proposals they would try to transmit them to the committee within 48 hours. That would be followed a minute as a memory of the committee of the course as quickly as possible by a memo-randum stating the Government's view or giving information to the committee on a purely factual hasis about the nature of the proposals so that the committee could take this into account when could take this into account when deciding whether to call ministers or persons before them.

Already the committee had recommended one of the draft decisions on guidelines for economic policy as an important matter for discussion by the House. There was a moral obligation on the Government of the moral obligation on the Government to ensure first this was discussed. As the committee had recommended this as an important matter for discussion, the Chancellor of the Exchequer had put a heavy reserve on the decision in the Council of Ministers.

people should be asked to express their view (Shouts of "Answer") I think the snawer is pretty clear.

Consultation would take the form either of a referendum or through a general election. They would have to wait and see how through a general election. They would have to wist and see how the circumstances developed.

The Government estimated that by 1980 Britain's net contribution to the Community would be 700m to 800m units of account, now based on the doller, and could be something like £300m plus, depending on the exchange rate. The basic principle they were insisting on in the discussions was that it was wrong to have a net transfer of resources from the least prosperous to the better off countries in the Community as at present. This had to be redeportured.

Negotiations had been going on between the "associable" countries—the African, Caribbean and the Community for some time to make a new agreement. A meeting of ministers in Januaica perimonih was likely and they would take purt.

World prices had risen because of droughts and bed harvests. But the principle was not to shelver behind such occurrences. There should be a change in the structure and regime of fite Community which, whether prices were high or low, would avoid excessive protectionism in the Community and benefit producers and consumers.

MR JAY (Wandaworth, Batter-

in his speech on April 1?

MR. CALLAGHAN—Certainly, there is no contradiction between the two except in the minds of the interpreters. I have gone through the contents and I defy anyone to point out where there is any difference between the two. The officerence between the two. Inepress do not attend these meetings.

All the issues would be brought together as the procedure went through. Some minor procedural progress had been made with reconsideration of the budget, the arrangements for which were ineoutcolie. arrangements for which were ina-quitable.

The only thing that would wreck further progress would be the prospect that the Tories would be returned at a General Election and that it would be quietly forgoiren, because they were regarded as a soft touch, if there was an incan-tive to the British people to ensure, stabilize and support a Labour Government, lette it was.

The Government did not propose to renegotiate the treaties. There was nothing in their manifesto to say they would. If they were going to renegotiate, why should they adopt a process which would require ratification by nine Parliaments, including their own, with all prospects that might ensue if they could do it wishout it?

As a result of entry into the EEC, the Commonwealth had sought and succeeded in diversifying its markets and finding new ones. For this reason New Zealand, among others, had not been able to deliver food anotas: in Britain. A number of Common-wealth countries felt that the process of diversifying had gone too far and there was not much that could be pulled back. The with the Commonwealth should be maintained as closely as possible. The Government were asking for a successful renegotiation. They were not asking to fail. He did not know whether they would succeed, and be did not know with what unswer they would come back.

It would be in Europe's interest if Britain succeeded MR CALLAGHAN—It is a well if Britain succeeded. It would be in Britain succeeded. It would be in Britain succeeded. It would be known feature of defeated generals that they always insist on tighting the last war. Is it his view that the British people should be consulted at the end of the renegotiations? It would be a great blow to Europe if Britzin were unsuccessful. As to whether it would be a blow for Britzin economically was a more dubious question. He was not wholly convinced about that. Politically it would be a flow for the sake of Burope as well as Britzin's relations with Europe. In that political sense it was probably more important to work for success as in the economic sense.

The Government's stritude could be put simply, that they remained in favour of the principle of entry. They wanted the Community to They wanted the Community to succeed and to grow and develop. They now said they could negotiate within the framework of the treaties. In other words, the negotiations now in hand were exactly those that the presties contemporates that the presties contemporates.

MR KIRK (Safrice Walder, C) said the most interesting thing about the four major problems rused by the Government was that they all had back and were still subject of what one might call renegotiation in the Community institutions. There was nothing new about any of them. In his two speeches the Foreign Secretary had formalized what was a rather informalized but nevertieless an on going process.

The last hereditary peers were included in the resignation has of Sir Alec Douglas-Home. A weird position had arisen. The hereditary peerage annihered between 700 and 800 members. On any showing it should take several conturies for should take several centuries for the system to die tuit.

There was a paradoxical situation because so far from the tion because so far from the system becoming more democratic it became less so. The House of Lords was overwhelmingly the preserve of one party.

There were two ways of dealing with that. Fither the Prime Minister recommended a mass creation of hereditary peerages, and ridiculed the whole thing out of existence, or the simpler way would be to expunge the altogether. The Bill sought to the that in as quick and painless a way as possible.

LORD MONSON said there were people who had serious objections to wearing sear belts, either because they left hemmed in and claustrophobic or because they found that seat belts made them complacent in their driving. LORD BALFOUR of INCHRYE
(C) asked how far it was the duty of the state to prevent an individual hurring himself through his own foolishness. There came a limit to the luterference by the Government in the lives of citzens, and this was n particular instance of it. LADY MACLEOD of BORVE said that as a magistrate she did not think a law oo this subject could be implemented. There were come or impresentation and regula-stready so many rules and regula-tions. Why should one more he added it. Motorists should have freedom of choice in the matter. LORD DE CLIFFORD (C) said the clause would be unenforce-

Expert inquiry into drink and driving law

The LORD CHANCELLOR, replying to a saries of amendments the matter was the increasing drinking and driving, said the Government had decided to set up an expert inquiry into all superior of the operation of the drinking motoring scene.

They were considering the terms that the increasing amount of alcohol heing drink, and the increasing amount of alcohol heing drink, and the increasing amount of alcohol heing drinking into the interest of the operation of the drinking interest the covernment were gravely concerned about the incidence of alcoholism in relation to road accidents and safety and because of the diminishing thereform of the existing provisions.

They were considering the terms of reference and other details. They had not yet decided the precise form the inquiry would take it would be an exercise drawing on practical experience. There was always a sense of a sich when a problem just consigned to the committee but this was not incomed as a long burial operation.

Because the Government were to held the off gravely concerned about the incidence of alcoholism in relation to the form accidents and safety and of Lord Chank because of the first here bearing stream to the first the whole position should be in Council of causes of a deteriorating stream of the responsion of the for the exercit of the force the The Government felt that the visitational of the problem required a constitutional of the law on dright and driving in its entirety and that the regrammanton must be a radical one because some of the Minister of a whom which the 1967 Act was based paigled with call for serious Bill.

A new Cosi for the Paris Opera

Jean-Pierre Ponnelle's new Cost fan: tutte for the Paris Opera has grown out of his production for Salzburg in 1969. In both houses he uses his own designs and carries the audience off to a blue and grey world, where time and money are there for the squandering. The Bay of Naples is nowhera to he seen. Naples is nowners to ne seen. The stage is strictly anonymous in its elegance, as the low ceilinged rooms of the sisters' house open out on to specious vistas which could he anywhere. There are terraces comfortable enough for a little morning sketching, cypresses and an island castle or two to admire in the distance, shady admire in the distance, shady groves for a wedding supper. Nothing disturbs the resce Ponnelle the toying with love. Ponnelle the designer has provided a series of ravishing stage pictures and he carefully stresses the artificiality of the whole piece. whole piece.

The colouring throughout is most delicate: Dorabella and Fiordiligi arrive for the first act finale dressed in black, yer it is the most ferching of blacks with discreer panels of grey in the front. They may be mourn-ing a departure, but they are not averse to a conquest.

As all too often, Ponnelle the producer lacks some of the taste and assurance of Ponnelle taste and assurance of Ponnelle the designer. The concept of Cost as a pure eighteenth century work with Don Alfonso, the man of reason, controlling the fate of those around him is altogether admirable. Cost is almost a piece of marivandage, a game of love and chance, except that there is not a great deal of chance when Don Alfonso holds all the cards. As Gabriel Baconier plays him a Gabriel Bacquier plays him, a suave pouter pigeon with white front and cuffs ser against hlack tails, he can but win. Tha wager oo the sisters' constancy is from the start foolish: the moment Guglielmo and Ferrando take it on they are betting against their own capshli-ties as suitor/seducers. And what military officer should do

Ponnelle stresses Don Alfonso's control over the situation by placing him for much of the first act in the very centre of the stage, a dark figure sil-houetted against a hright white sky. He makes the geometry of the wager take shape as the couples are shuffled. Then in the second half he stands aside. There is nothing more to he done and it has all been e little too easy, perhaps despicably easy. "Sein schon ach so, die jungen Leut!", as another baritone said on snother occasion. Bacquier's Alfonso is far less forceful than, say, Fischer-Dies-kau's, yet even more knowing in its very reticence. A com-plete realization, excellently

Had Ponnelle allowed the rest of his staging to flow from this Alfonso then we would have had a masterly production. But too often he allows himself to be distracted by incidentals. The curtain rises on a serving girl running from the arms of one lover to another: unnecessary, the infidelity is all there in the overture. Despina is also Mile Perriers Glyndebourne two seasoos hack as a sharp and witty Blonde in Entjührung. In the meantime the voice has grown a deal in strength and volume. There is a liveliness and attack on stage which make Daniele Perriers a singer to be noted and probably to he cherishad. She might have dropped the chocolate pot when exciting after "In nomini", but the return on stage to pick it up prolonged the well-deserved round of applause for the aria.

The gamblers and lovers are handled with much more skill. Ferrando and Fiordiligi are brought forward as the more important pair of the two be-cause in their case the game hecomes a serious duel, which in turn, as both the music and the productioo suggest, could emerge into genuine attraction.
The key moment comes after Ferrando's "Tradito, schernito", which is quite rightly retained in this production and is sung by Ryland Davies with is sung by Ryland Davies with a fire and eloquence which make his speedy return to Covent Garden essential. Ferrando's "Volgi a me", again superbly sung by Davies, does the trick and rips from Flordiligi the cry "Hai vinto". It is perhaps the one moment of pure passion in the opera and was played as such. was played as such.

Margaret Price's Fiordiligi is magnificent. She follows the words of "Come scoglio" in being rock-like in her fidelity throughout the first act, and rock-like in voica too, with each note finely hewn. The fall when it comes is that much the greater, and "Per pieta" is the aria which points to it. Iosef Neapolitan maid in Danièle Per-riers, who replaced Teresa Stra-tas at the performance I heard.

gramme is, as always, sdmi-rably pscked with fact snd opinioo, but unexplicably refers not once hut twice to Cosi ss so 'Opera huffa in tre stri': "Il n'y a pss de place pour les stars". Well, I am afraid there is when Miss Price sings "Per pieta" as she does here, very slowly, very affectingly, until the final section where she suddenly gethers fresh (snd false) strength from her puri-

Tom Krause and Jane Berhié are put slightly in the shade by the emphasis on Ferrando and Fiordiligi. Miss Berhie has moved up the social, if not the intelligence, scale by changing from Despina, which she sings on Decca's nsw recording of Cosi together with Paris's male trio of Bacquier/Davies/Krause, to Dorabella. It is an assured, sophisticated interpretation very much in line with Krause's amiable, well balanced and hap py-go-lucky Guglielmo. Kreuse is a survivor from Ponnelle's Salzhurg Così, and he remains constant over the years.

Josef Krips conducts the opera without a hint of heaviness. All is light, grace and elegance, with individual sections of the orchestra flutes, bassoons, clarinets, violins put on display like the six solo singers when their moment comes. Often it is the veteran Mozartians, such as Böhm and Mozartians, such as Böhm and Krips, who produce the finest Cosis. In common with Don Alfonso, they seem to know It

Wandsworth School Choir

Aldeburgh

William Mann

For some years oow Russell Burgess and his choir from Wandsworth Boys' School have Wandsworth Boys' School have been closely associated with Benjamin Britten's music, in concert snd on record. On Monday evening the school choir gavs e whole programme of Britten's choral music, for hroken as well ss unbroken voices, et Aldehurgh Festival. As a welcome surprise, at the end of the concert, the composer walked to the froot of the directors' box and acknow-ledged the vociferous applause: he showed oo sign, it was encouraging to see, of invalid status, but close frieods report that his recovery from his cardiac operation last year, although remarkable, is by no means complete.

All four items in the programme were settings of ballads, new as well as old. This may he fortuitous though Britten has always heen a lively musical story-teller, and the ballad gives such a composer a chance to construct music on an extended scale. A splendid example, and the centrepiece of this concert, was The Children's this concert, was The Children's Crusade, written for and dedicated to the Wandsworth cboir. Brecht's poetic narrative of the Brecht's poetic narrative of the 55 children who roamed Polsod trying to escape the horrors of the Second World War and to form their own seosible, joyous community, was an obvious subject for Britten who knew how to illustrate, how to com-ment and heighten the text, how to draw many iocideots into one musical integer. He composed it for hoys' choir

The Wendsworth choir's attack precision and range of nuance were fully on show in this performance, and the shrill climax at "Nothing like the world they're leaving" was momentous in impact. Hypnotic in its effect, that comprises less than half the Meylevi ceremony. The rest is mevievi ceremony. The rest is made up of processions, much ritual howing snd prostration, music, prayers and a reading from the Koran. The solemnity of the men, from two young boys to a grey-hearded elder, helps to prepare the spectators for the actual whirling.

So does the mosic, with its chanting, tha sohbing of plaintiva flutes, drums, cymhals and a kind of zither. Sad at first, it hecomes more juhilant in the march that sccompanies the solemn rotations. solemn rotations. If a theatre acems a stranga

I only wish that the introductory lecture, written hy Professor Schimmel, of Harvard, had simplified its confusing anecdotes and told us instead more detail: the significance, for instance, of the red cushion to which everyone bowed, and just why tha whole ceremony started seven centuries ago.

A web to snare three giants Travesties

Irving Wardle

Tom Stoppard is not the first man to have noticed thet Lenin, James Joyce, and the Dadaist Tristan Tzara were all living in Zurich during the Great War. But what other playwright, with these three revolotionary figure-heads to draw on, would have chosen for his hero a minor British consular official called Henry Carr, of whom history records nothing except that he sued Joyce for the cost of s pair of trousers? As before, Stoppard has laid hands oo the philusophic dumb-bells and sent them flosting up like halloons. flosting up like halloons.

Travesties debates the claims of art and revolution; the materialist view of history; and the double-talk of privileged individualism and socialist freedom: hur nothing is more important to the play than Mr. Carre ant to the play than Mr Carr's trousers. The facts of the case are that Joyce, as husiness manager of e short-lived thestre manager or e snort-lived thestre company, iovited Carr to play in The Importance of Being Eurnest, and refused to stump up for Carr's expeoditure on Algy's wardrohe. From this obscure footnote to Ulysses, Stoppard has spun ont a faotastically elaborate with to coare his three giants in web to soare his three giants in the same play. There is virtually no evidence of actual meetings hetween them: but the play overcomes this by involving them all in e rewritten version of The Importance. Lenin (whom I had hoped to see as Miss Prism) plays the lesst part in this. But Carr's Algy is partnered by Tzara's Jack; Joyce (second name Augusta according to Stoppard) periodically hooms in ss Lady Bracknell; and the two girls (Gwendolen and Cecily, as ever) cultivate intellectual attach-ments to the works of Joyce and Lenin which stand between them and union with their frivolous suitors. One of the great pleasures of the evening is Stoppard's skill in moving io and out of Wilde's dialogue, and rewriting it for his own purposes ("Are they Bolsheviks?" They dine with us; or come in the evening et any rare").

the evening et any rate "). No one can accuse him of irreverence, as the action takes place in the memory of his old hero-first seen shuffliog on io carpet slippers to bash out old favourites on an upright piano and reminisce about his great days in the war. His opening speech is one of Stoppard's star translated underlying emotion turns: marvellously organized design of the Oly into its purest musical essence. under its rambling surface, Munich in 1972 getting the basic facts scross and cootrasting the official romantic view with private animosities, in order finally to imply the futility of any hope for sn objective accooot of the past.

Much the most vital character is Carr himself, who is not based on history at all. Stoppard develops those trousers into s ruling passion (Carr detects patriotic stirriogs by his impulse to purchase something of mili-tary cut) and the figure becomes a diplometic extension of Algy, supremely coofident and booe idle to the extant of amnesia (usually addressing Joyce as "Doris" or "Janice"). In my time I bave hesped e fair quantity of superlatives on Joho Wood, bot I cannot remember any funcier, or more perfectly articulated, performance than this. His gradual change from condescension to excited vanity as the prospect of playing Algy seizes his imagination ("You were a wooderful Goneril at Eton", remarks Gwendolen) is one of the memories I shall treasure.

The weakness of the scheme is its complete failure to shsorb Lenin: quotes from Krupskaya's hland memoirs, interwoven with Lenin's own implactable systematical affects a chilly and statements. woven with Lenin's own implacable statements, offer a chilly Soviet equivalent of Mrs Wilson's Diary, but one still has the feeling that the main play has come to a stop. Otherwise Peter Wood's production, with its manifold time changes and action recaps (prompted by speremptory cuckoo clock), its limerick and musical comedy dialogue, and its use of simultaneous events. works' with a taneous events, works with a heautifully controlled fluency

As played by Tom Bell and John Hurt, Joyce and Tzara switch st ease herweeo comic styles without losing all connexion with their historical selves: and Frank Windsor's Lenin comes over with just enough weight not to sahorage the surrounding frivolity. Though, as the aged Carr snaris, "he wasn't Lenin then".

"For some people this music may be able to help them to recreate for themselves these images: for others they will be pieces for solo violin and two

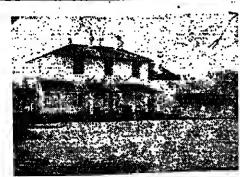

For Yehudi Menuhin, the six movements were quite plainly no mere marter of abstract notes. Though rarely called upon far demonstrative virtuosity, tha solo violin is very much to the fore es the transmitter of Mar-tin's personal reaction to each scene, and the compost's uoder-lying compassion elicited play-ing as deeply felt and heautiful as anything London has heard from Mr Menuhin for many months, especially io the brooding cantilena of "Imege de la chambre haute" (No 2) and "Image de Gethsemane" (No 4).

Movements depicting Judas's torment and "the crowd's sadistic enjoyment of the sight of suffering" bring adequate contrast, though without unduly disturbing the prevalent feeling of emotion recollected in tran-quillity. Not a work for sensa-tion seekers of the avantgarde (even in respect of orchestral antiphony) hut an oasis in the desert for the average music lover wanting new experience.

Earlier, Mr Menuhin made a hrave shot at both conducting and relishing the bravura of Viotti's A minor concerto (No 22), music always enjoyable (as eudience applause after each movement signified) even if never important. In Mozart's G major piano concerto. K453. Mr Menuhin was also conductor for his sister Hephzibah, whose delicate clarity and control the Sea conference starting io Caracas next week to achieve the Sea conference starting 10 Caracas next week to achieve any tangihle result in the form of a convention or conventions acceptable to the 149 governments represented. Indeed, such is the certainty that the tenweek conference will he inconclusive, that a follow-up conference has already heen olsoned for Vrenna next spring. To say that the conference is the most important for mankied since the setting np of the United Nations is on hyperbole. It also represents arguably the most complex set of negotiations ever undertaken. More governments ara taking part than at any orevinus international meeting, including a general assembly of the Unired Nations itself.

A sea of troubles for international law makers

The number of subjects to he discussed is equally dauoring. There are 25 main headings on the agenda for Caracas, subdivided into some 90 items. A note at the end reassures those still in doubt that the list is note at the end reassures those still in doubt that the list is "not necessarily complete." Not e single item on the agends can be considered "soft" in the he considered "soft" in the sense that an agreement appears relatively easy to achieve. Every hesding is potentially controversial.

The headings ioclude: the setting up of an international regime for the sea-hed and the ocean floor heyond national jurisdiction; the territorial sea; the exclusive economic zone beyond the territorial sea; yond the territorial sea; straits used for international nsvicstion; the high seas; the rights and interests of land-locked countries, shelf-locked states and states with parrow shelves or short coastlines; preservation of the marine eovironment, including the control of pollutinn; scientific research; archipelagos; enclosed and semi-enclosed seas; artificial islends and installations; the settlement of disputes; reginnal arrangements; and many other

On all these subjects there has already been considerable preparatory work. Three expert sub-committees of the Uoked Natioos Sea-Bed Committee have been preparing draft treaty articles to be put hefore the conference. But apart from a few relatively small areas, it will be tactically impossible to coosider the items in isolation. For essen-tially Caracas, for 10 weeks, will be one vast horsetrading arena in which conflicting rights and ioterests will be hartered and bargaioed for, baggled over,

No one expects the United swopped and abandooed. At the Nations loternational Law of end, it is hoped—not at Caracas end, it is hoped—not at Caracas and perbapa not even at Vienns next year—a package deal will emerge, not the ideal solution for eny single country, but an acceptably balanced parcel for

> The conference will be strik ing in another way too. For once, the alliances made between governments will have little to do with political ideology and everything to do with geographical position. Memhers of some traditional groupings, it is true, tradicional grmupings, it is true, have, up to a point interests io common. Countries of the third world show signs of adopting common attitudes and taking concerted, tactical action at the conference. Thase countries, rightly feel that up to now the law of the ses has been dominated by the philosophies of tha developed industrialized maritime nations. They are determined in see that this stranglehold is broken once and for all.
> But as hetween themselves,

But as hetween themselves, the developing nations have in practice vastly different prob-lems and interests on law of the sea issues. Poor, land-locked Chad can have little real identity of purpose or action with, say, Peru, or Malawi with Indonesia.

Peru, or Malawi with Indonesia.

What is being sought, moreover, is not just a set of laws which have heen passed by the necessary majority laid down by the rules of procedure, hut a real consensus. The rules provide for decisions to be taken by a two-thirds majority, if unanimity is found to be impossible. But it is recognized that on any of the major issues, a consensus will be essential, hecause no decision would have any real chance of being implemented, if any of the major maritime powers, or even a maritime powers, or even a significant group of smaller countries, were against it and chose not to be hound by it.

The prospects for success ara not, on the surface, particularly favourable. The possibility of 149 countries being abla to agree on any substantial issue seems. on any substantial issue seems remote. But the very fact that they are going to try, and have put much effort into preparing for the conference, is a positive sign. However much they all want to get their own way in the negotiations, the realization of the disastrous consequences, for manking as a whole which mankind as a whole, which would follow a breakdown of the talks, cannot be far from their

All that has changed. Pax Americane has brought the United States hack into the very capitals with which it was locked in combat over the past two decades. No non-Arab figure has captured Arah imaginations in recent years like Dr Henry Kissinger. And on the eve of his visit to the Middle East, President Mison was suggested by a dent Nixon was suggested by a respected Arab columnist as a suitable candidate for the Nobel

Certainly the wheel appears

To many the 1967 Middle East war and its aftermath threatened war and its aftermath threatened even greater disaster. The Soviet Union secured what looked like water-tight treaty relations with Egypt and Iraq and Syria was sewn up as well. The Russians were arming the Arabs while the United States seemed to become more firmly entrenched on the side of the Arabs' enemy every day.

To those whn have seen it all before, it just seems like another round. But there is no doubt that the power scales in honest tace."

The Nixon visit is more than just a symbol of the new American role on the Middle East. stage. As traditional centres of Arab empire, Cairo and Damascus have the sura of trophies. However, in terms of ultimate American interests they are the political price to he paid in the interests of stability. It is that austere stop on President Nixon's Arab tour, Saudi Arabia, which throws some light on America's intentions. America's intentions.

Long before the October war, it was king Faisal who sounded the first warning in the United States. If there was no change in Washington's Middle East policy, he warned, then he could not justify bie pro-American with America's new even handed policy in force there appears little to hinder the hirth of the new special Sandi-American relationship. Even before President Nixon began his tour, the two countries were locked in discussions in Washington aimed at mapping out a package deal, all-purpose friendship covering everything from oil and arms to industrialization and social development. It is a deal which will undoubtedly secure America's future off needs from the Saudis—as much as one third of total United States needs in the next decade.

To the Arabs who have become accustomed to the fears of Dr Kissinger the miracle maker, there is an expectation that his master has also kept something up his sleeve. However, this time, they believe that the beneficiaries will be the Americans. Since the mechanics that the beneficiaries will be the Americans. Since the mechanics of peace-making are Dr. Kissinger's preserve, no new peace "miracles" are expected to result from the trip. However, there is a growing helief that Mr Nixon might be thinking of throwing oil on troubled domestic waters.

Lack of information is the greatest handicap for penal reformers

Why all the secrecy about what goes on in prisons?

Prisoners are not eligible for home leave unless they are serving sentences of at least two years, or for preparation for release through outside employment unless serving more than last two unless serving more than last ready access to laformation. At present it has not ment unless serving more than four years. In the Netherlands, 2 per cent of prison sentences exceed one year: in England and Wales, 29 per cent. Last year, 130 community service orders were made in Nottinghamshire; more than half the offenders had at least one previous custodial sentenca but only 17 defaulted.

Three isolated facts which are not especially significant on their own, but they all throw light on some aspect of the com-plex problem of dealing with law-breskers. Many questions, of law-breskers. Many questions, of course, have no simple answer, and inquirers must be referred in books and articles: for example, wbar are the arguments for and against reliance in deterrence as a means of social control? Or, what does prison actually do to people?

Information is needed at many levels: by MPs, by the peers who tomorrow will be debating prisons, by the media, students, even schoolchildren, besides concerned citizens. The more reformers know about the situation, the more likely are their proposals to be soundly based.

Conversely, objections to innovation also often suffer from incomplete knowledge of the facts. The Home Secretary said last month: "There bas to be substantial popular interest and snbstantial popular interest and

It is not just a matter of pro-viding an occasional refresher course. Anyone managing a large industrial concern expects a service providing details of the latest technical information and research, enabling him to select and obtain the most relevant items. Yet the law-and-order items. Yet the law-and-order industry, which not only costs an estimated 5500m a year (Mr Norman Fowler, MP, The Times, March 8, 1973) but is also responsible for keeping the country on the narrow path between lawlessness and repression has no such service.

Others with a particular, and largely unmet, need for information include people responsible for training, concerned in a particular problem, preparing for promotion or writing an article; and columnary arganizations. and voluntary nrganizations, whose shoestring bodgets often

A network already exists in other fields of social policy, to collect and disseminate specialist knowledge, including notably the National Children's Bureau, the National Youth Bureau and the National Youth Bureau and the National South Sou the National Youth Bureau and the Institute for the Study of Drug Dependence. order expenditure, as Mr Fowler showed) and too much of it is published very late or remains unpublished within the Home Office. If it is good enough to base policy on, it is aurely good enough to publish.

Research should be scrutinized in the light of previous findings and practical experience. Administrators, prison staff, probation officers and others first need to be informed of research findings, and then to discuss their implications. By an historical accident, probation officers, not being civil servants, can say what they like; but prison staff too may wish the public to see their perspective, for example to show that some public to see their perspective, for example to show that some humanely intended suggestion could have unforeseen and damaging consequences. Informed public debate is inhibited by the Official Secrets Act and the Civil Service tradition of "not embarrassing the minister". Reports of internal departmental working parties, too, are not available outside.

Six years ago the Fulton Committee on the Civil Service said: We think that the administra-tive process is surrounded by too much secrecy. The public would be better served if there were o greater amount of open-ness.

Similarly, the Franks Comminee on the Official Secrets away in parliamentary answers or in Prison Department annual Act: The public have o right reports. There is far too little to know about such matters as general police methods and pri cedures and prison treatment (though not) information of a kind which would, for instance, ba of direct use in escaping from prison.

It is time these principles were implemented.

Another essential fact is the view from the receiving end. Commonsense demands to know what reaction our expensive what reaction our expensive penal measures really produce, as opposed to what we would like to think they do. What actually happens in prison, borstal or detention centre? (Or on probation for that matter but probationers are allowed to talk about any nonsenses in-flicted on them, though they are seldom asked). Free speech is also a safeguard against maladministration. Prisoners cannot be stopped from talking after they come ont: why use scarce staff censoring their correspondence while inside?

Unwelcome embrace for the youn Dragon King

It seems like only yesterday that the ugliest character in Arab minda was Uncle Sam. On walls of Arab capitals and across the countryside he appeared in his top hat, decorated with the stars and stripes, ever at work sabotaging the Arah march of progress. Behind every conspiracy was the ubiquitous Uncle Sam. His deadly weapon was the dollar and his faithful Bhutan, whose 18-year-old mon-arch was formally enthronad as the fourth hereditary Druk Gyalpo or Dragon King, ear-lier fais month, is slowly emers-ing both from the suffocating embrace of mother India and from the medieval isolation in which the country has been en-veloped for centuries. geo-political reality.

In a speech on the day after, the coronation, in an interview with foreign journalists, and in informal talks with diplomatic guests, the young monarch, king Jigme Singye Wangchuk, kept returning to the theme of national self-reliance, of the need for reduced dependence on foreign (and by implication Indian) aid and for the maintenance of Bhutan independence and sovereignty.

On the radio last weekend there was a discussion between two MPs, conducted in the most cordial terms, about whether politicians were too rude to each other. The ERC had comment other. The BBC had commis-sinned a poll which showed that many people thought the answer was yes. (That is the kind me poll for which it is hard to frame sensible questions. Few people would want to say that MPs were not rude enough.)

The MPs in the programme were John Grant for Labour and Sir Geoffrey Howe for the Coo-servatives. There was one point I was fairly certain they would make, and sure enough they did. They said it was not the fault of the MPs but the fault of the MPs but the fault of the nedia for playing np the rows and rudeness among politicians in preference to serious policy

Sir Geoffrey complained that most radio and television interviews were limited to about seven minutes, in which the poor MPs were encouraged by interviewers to provoke each other and had no time for reasoned argument. But surely seven minutes is ample time to make serious points if the MP has any to make I ample had an adjusted to the MP has any to make. Politicians ge in for slanging matches on television because matches on television because they believe that is what the public wants from them, and they are right. There are newspapers which report politics in great and responsible datal—The Times is one of them—but they do not attract the readership of papers like The Sun, which go in for the Shock Rowschool of political journalism, in the correct belief that this is what most people enjoy.

Executive resigned, Keith Kyle chaired a television discussion in which he firmly disallowed any mention of the religious hostilities central to the issue.
And what bappens when political parties are given air time to use exactly as they like? Why, they use it to score poli-tical points off each other. Do you remember that one the Conservatives broadcast during the election campaign, which sparked sufficient controversy to last several days? The newspapers do not invent the name-calling and raucous hebayiour which goes on in the House of Commons. They would not report it if it did not happen. MPs should stop complaining about the media and get on with the knockabout, which is what we pay them for.

Spike Milligan held a press conference yesterday 22 an nomice his show at the Adelphi Theatre next week. The Duke of Gloucester was affectionately, known to the Household Brigade, of which he rose to become Senior Colonel, as Uncle Pineapple. This sobriquet derived from his ralent for falling asleep during reheareals of Trooping the Colour without falling off his horse, with his bearskin nodding like the top-knot of the fruit in question. Lesser men would have fallen off.

The Duke was a devoted Army man, although the Regency Act of 1937 prevented him from having a normal military career. His frequent visits to Army messes were mutually enjoyed, except by the weak-kneed. The Duke would never sit down, but stood for hours in front of the fire, legs astride. This meant that everybody else had to remain on their feet. Lily-livered subalterms and fragile majors would take turns during a long evening to creep out and sit down. He was the last surviving Knight of St Patrick. The insignie of the order will be seen for the last time at a ceremonial occasion at the Duke's funeral on Friday. His death has caused embar rassment as well as grief to the several organizations, such as the King Edward's Hospital Fund, whose articles specify that their Presidents must be sons of a sovereign. Some other royal will have to act as a sort of Regent until Prince Andrew comes of age.

Quite frankly, word processing could be a waste of your time.

"Word processing" is possibly one of the most misunderstood terms in office management today. Which means that a lot of people stand to waste an awful lot of time by approaching it in the wrong way.

The truth is that word processing stands for more than just a sophisticated collection of office equipment.

Simply spelt out, it means a combination of people, procedures and the most effective equipment. All designed to provide a faster turnaround of work and a better secretarial service.

MICS

At IBM, we created the word processing concept with exactly this in mind. So it's no accident that each one of our machines, as well as being used individually, forms part of a complete system.

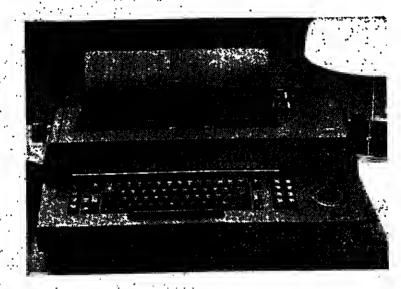

A thought to begin with.

Shorthand can be important. And very suitable it is for a lot of office work. But one of the most efficient ways of getting letters, instructions or text to the typewriter is through our range of dictating equipment.

Our Model 173 Microphone Communication System, for instance. It reduces the time taken to create a document, right at the outset. And of course you can dictate what you want, whenever you want.

So even at this stage, everyone has benefited from a freer, more efficient working environment.

Magnetic typewriters.
More work, less sweat.

The new 82M Memory Typewriter, and the MC82 are just a part of our range of magnetic typewriters.

Each one can give your secretary freedom that she's never had before.

Freedom to type at draft speed. And, thanks to the famous IBM correction device, top copies that are error free.

And freedom to incorporate author changes, as well.

So what you finish up with is a happier, more relaxed secretary who's able to produce more work without having to work more.

And who has a lot more time to devote to your other needs.

Copier II.

A better copy at a better price.

There's no point in producing beautifully typewritten documents if the quality is lost on the copier.

Copier II can make crisp black on white copies from letters, colour magazines, books, poor originals, oversize documents, even photographs.

Fast. And economically, too.

Which could turn out to be very good news.

For you. And, once again, for your secretary.

We're with you all the way.

A word processing system can only be as good as the people behind it.

Of course, this applies as much to you as it does to us.

We realise that each individual company we talk to is likely to have different requirements. Maybe all you Talking to our expert support group is one way to find out. They're trained to help you establish your requirements, balance your secretarial and typing support. And to train your staff.

In short, we offer you a closer control on your costs, a faster turnaround of work, and a higher quality secretarial service.

And, having read this far, you'll probably agree with us that looking further into IBM Word Processing certainly won't prove to be a waste of your time.

Quite the opposite, in fact.

Thanks to Dictaphone and the Telecord system, any company large or small can have the benefits of centralised dictation. Benefits that everyone enjoys.

For the executive, constant availability.

The Telecord system is simplicity itself. For the executive there are no tapes or cassettes or knobs to fiddle with. Nothing bulky on his desk. He simply picks up his phone and speaks. No waiting for a secretary, no hassles about after hours working.

For the girl, a pleasanter day.

In fact, the Dictaphone Telecord smooths out the day's work flow, cuts out the five o'clock rush hour. That's one reason typists like it. Another is the clear voice reproduction—there's no puzzling over squawky recordings.

And for the firm, firm money savings.

Dictaphone will plan, quite free of charge, your centralised dictating system.

When it's installed we train your staff until they're completely at home with the system. Centralised supervision makes it easy to maintain high standards of quality and output. The Dictaphone Telecord system has a host of automatic features. And it's exceptionally economical, with low initial investment and minimal maintenance.

democratic industrial powers. It give absolute priority to the avoidance of mass unemployment The other parties, following the advice of Count Carli, insisted on tackling inflation by tough credit restrictions which, it is generally believed, would cause a rapid rise in unemployment.

Although the disagreement had been whittled down to a fairly small area before the Government fell, it is clear that it is a gennine and fairly fundamental one. The Socialists had gone as far as they could in sacrificing the aspirations of their supporters, and it may now be best for both them and everybody else if they go into opposition for a while. Ideally perhaps one might hope for a ministry of all the talents, stretching from trade union figures—who include Commuists-to Signor Agnelli, the most distinguished representative of big business, which would obtain support from both trade unions, employers and overseas investors for a short-term emergency programme involving both wage restraint and greater fiscal justice. But that is almost certainly a pipedream, if only because there is no political leader—not even. ## LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Protection under trade union law

From Professor K. W. Wedderburn Sir, Mr Campbell Adamsoo (June 11) claims that it is a "myth" that the Trade Union and Labour Relations Bill would broadly restore the pre-1971 law regulating industrial conflict. His argument contains misunderstandings and myths of his own.
It is true that the Act of 1906 protected from civil liability any person acting in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute who no effect on the regime. I am not bere concerned to argue what regime we may think should be best for incherance of a trade dispute woo induced a breach of a contract of employment (at that time thought to be the major legal liability inhibiting the right to strike); and that the Bill protects inducing breach of contract generally in trade disputes.

This exception was recommended by the Donovan Royal Commission for a very simple reason. For decades the protection in the 1906 Act seemed to be an adequate basis for the right to withdraw labour. But judicial decisions of the 1950s and 1960s extended the law about inducement in such a way that those who caused breaches of workers' contracts were held liable for inducing coosequential breaches of or interference with an employer's commercial contracts (eg of supply).

This, the judges beid, did not fall within the 1906 Act—neither within its protection for inducing breach of employment contracts, nor within its protection for interfering with "made, business or employment". To re-establish the right of industrial action that was plainly loteoded by the 1906 Act, it is therefore impera-tive to extend the protection to inducing breach of and interference modern indicial context, protection for contracts only of employment is in practice no protection at all.

Mr Adamson adds a dangerous and abstract myth when he goes on to suggest that the Bill's protection will enable workers to "black", enable workers to "black", blockade or boycott whomsoever they choose, including employers. companies, public corporations or any other bodies which have nothing any other bodies which have nothing to do with the dispute in questioo", and "public utilities and food supplies". In many such instances they would not be protected because they were not acting in furtherance or contemplation of their trade

A closer inspection of the case law A closer inspection of the case law would have revealed a good example of this limitation to Mr Adamson. In Torquay Hotel v Cousins (1969) 2 Ch 106, the Conrt of Appeal beld that pickets, who, being in dispute with one hotel, extended their picketing against a nearby hotel (which they genuinely believed was supporting the first botel in the dispute) were not in law acting in dispute was the first botel in the dispute) were not in law acting in first botel in the dispute. furtherance of their original dispute in making that extension.

The myth now being put about that the Bill would set workers free to picket and boycott oo the rampage up and down the land is based upon ignorance of this limitation, continued in the Bill from the pre-1971 law, confining immunity to acts that further the original trade dispute. It is true, as Mr Adamson says, that the Bill defines trade dispute as including disputes arising "out-side Great Britain". The reason for this is obvious. In the modern world of multi-national corporations and trans-national employers' power there is an urgent need to establish a countervailing power of trans-national collective bargaining. The ability of unions to bargain effectively is related to their ability to take indostrial action; therefore rans-national bargaining must allow for such action to take account of a bave gone very much further in providing immunities for iodustrial action. Mr Adamson would now restrict it to a Little-Englander's version of an ineffective protection which would accord no sound basis for even the right to withdraw

Moreover, in so doing he would, in effect, retain over a wide area that civil liability for inducing breach of contract which was at the core of the Industrial Relations Act 1971 (section 96). The repeal of section 96 is at the heart of repeal of the Act. That section is the very cause of much of the damage done to industrial relations; and is some-thing which Mr Adamsoo once gava the impression he wisely wished to Sir, Mr Peter Hain (Letters May 30) is mistaken in thinking that the evil of treating a man as a second-class citizen because he is coloured is unique since "it is applied auto-metically". Women in Muslim countries are also "automatically deprived and of their souls as well.

Showing disapproval of Greek regime

From Lord Caccia Sir, On return from a visit to Greece, which I bave known to peace and war for some 35 years, may I ask for your space to make one suggestion? It is that in our relations with Greece we should face the fact that cowadays unilateral gestures of HMG's disapproval such as the cancellation at short conce of a naval visit can have Greece, only our power to affect the When we had the foremost fleet in the Mediterracean and sterling loans were needed to sustain the Greek economy, things were sometimes different. Now, though visits can still creete good will, the Royal Navy is no longer on its own a deterrent force in those waters and it is we who need foreign loans to main-tain a standard of living which we deem to be onr due, but which we do not earn on current account by our own labours.

Consequently the only result we can achieve by hostile gestures is damage to our exports and to our credibility. At the present time our exporters are bidding for contracts which add up to some £300 million and we are far from being the sole available suppliers. If HMG consider that it is in the oarlooal interest at this time to put those bids at hazard for a political gesture, that is their judgment, though it is hard to believe that it is the considered view of the Foreign Secretary. Maybe it is in this case and elsewhere the price of keeping party unity. But the price would be more credible, ine price would be more credible, if our ecoomy were seen to be in a strong enough ecooomic position to afford such acts of state without recourse to foreign lenders.

At present we are not in that position and we do our national standing bears by tion and we do our hattoned states in the believed that by gestures we still had the power oo our own to alter foreign regimes. We have long foreign regimes. We have long learnt that lesson in our dealings with the Soviet Union and it is rima that we accepted it elsewhere.

To others, and to our friends io

it looks as if this should be a whole time job and, while on regimes, one which is probably more than could be done by any party government and certainly oot by a minority Yours faithfully, CACCIA, House of Lords.

Indian nuclear test From Mr John Maddox

Sir, Lord Chalfont is right (June 10) to say that the Indian nuclear explosion will sharpen interest in next year's review of the Non-Proliferation Treaty but wrong, I think, in his implied estimate of the virtues of the treaty among the battens on "the nuclear Pandora's box".

Almost from the beginning, the Indians have protested that the treaty is unjustly asymmetrical. Non-nuclear powers must put up with international inspection of their peaceful nuclear iostallations; nuclear powers are exempt from this indignity and can, moreover, continue testing weapons.

And the treaty includes on safe-guards against nuclear attack, even by one of its signatories. The under-taking by the Soviet Union and the United States jointly to raise such matters as complaints in the Security Council, in which all potential aggressors bave a veto, is a laughable substitute. For this and other reasons, it bas always been clear that the Non-Proliferation Treaty cannot last in-definitely, or even for very long, in its present form. Among the concessions by the nuclear powers to those non-nuclear states which complained of the draft treaty's asymmetry, the nuclear powers eventu-ally agreed (in the preamble) to negotiate "the discontinuance of all negotiate "the discontinuance of all test explosions of nuclear weapoos for all time" and in Article VI to negotiate "effective measures relating to the cessarion of the nuclear arms race at an early date and to nuclear disarmament". The review specified by the treaty for next year is intended to ensure that the "purnose of the presemble and the propose of the preamble and the pro-visions of the treaty are being realized "

In this light, the Iodian explosion may be a useful reminder to the nuclear powers that they have not much time to sarisfy the obligations placed oo them by the treaty (which is not to suggest that the explosion is not a misfortune for other reasons, perbaps most seriously in its likely effects on donor countries). Bring-ing China and France into the fold should be another objective.

But there is an even stronger case for replacing the treaty, which requires signatories to refrain from acts leading to proliferation, by a positive and comprehensive instrument for identifying the uses made of nuclear materials, in nuclear and numbers of the state of the s non-nuclear states alike. Yours faithfully, JOHN MADDOX

Making truth actionable

From Mr A. H. Thornhill Sir, What a piry Mr Robert Taylor, Chairman of the Guild of British Newspaper Editors, describes the Rehabilitation of Offenders Bill as having "all the makings of a rogues' charter" (Letters, May 27).

In contrast Mr Alexander Lyon, Minister of State, Home Office, described the Bill, introduced by Mr Binty Direct Will, Piers Dixon, MP, as containing "nodoubtedly a principle that will command respect from almost every well-meaning person of the community ". The principle referred to is that rehabilitation of the ex-offender requires that when he is long estab-lished on a "straight" course, the slate should be rubbed clean. His remade life should not be in peril of a long past peccadillo being raked up against him.

Who are the chartered "rogues" to be? The Bill provides that certain convictions shall become "spent" if no further offences are committed during a specified "rebabilitation period". It does not apply where a prison sentence of more than 30 months is given. Where the sentence is more than six months, but no more than 30

Irish Catholics

From Mr Philip Panter Sir, Dom Christopher Jenkios (June 8) voices the thoughts of many English Catholics. We do not deny Irish Catholics the right to love their country; bot we think it strange that this love should seem to blind some of them both to the corms of some of them both to the corms of natural justice and to the moral im-peratives of our common faith.

We are in the debt of Irish Catbolics for the wooderful service they bava given and are still giving to the Church in this country. The silent and selfless service of many priests, nuns and religious is a totally effective retort to the sense of joury we feel when their compatriots those who serve in this way seldom speak, and because they do not speak vicious brutality and terror seem to be condooed.

Thus our witness to the true nobility and ideals of our common faith is besmirched and foully dishonoured. Let Irish Church leaders make what pronouncements they think fit. It is time the English Courch spoke its miod in defence of the true witness which our ancient the true virtues which our ancient faith proclaims. Yours faithfully

Sole producers From Mr James Turner

Sir, In yesterday's newspaper I read two reports regarding loss of industrial production. The first stated that the Flixborough plant is the sole producer of caprolactum in Britain; without its supplies users of the chemical ara left in a precarious situation".

The second report recorded that a ICI factory in Cheshire (which is suffering a 50 per cent cut in production because of industrial action) is the United Kingdom's sole prodocer of soda ash, a vital ingredient io glass making". It appears that a crisis threateos the food industry as result.

Does this coincidence highlight a caose for coocern? Has the industrial world forgotten, or ignored, the old advice as to where not to put all its eggs? Yours faithfully, . JAMES TURNER,

London grammar schools

From Mrs Judith Stone and Mrs Felicity Toylor

Sir, The original decision to make Loodon schools fully comprehensive was taken while the flying bombs were still falling in 1944. And yet the Conservative opposition on the LLEA are complaining that this policy is being "rushed through".

Selection at eleven has long since been discredited and more of the supporters of the grammar schools has even attempted to produce any argument in its favour. How then cao we justify the continuation of the voluctary aided selective schools, wheo we know that selec-rive education is neither just nor effective in mobilizing all our national resources of taleo.

We are told that the grammar schools preserve an element of choice in the education system. Indeed they do. But whose choice is it? Choosing a grammar school is like "window shopping" with empty pockets: parents may know what they would like hut they cannot choose it because they do not have the power to secure it for themselves. So they stand with their noses pressed to the window, while the grammar schools eojoy the luxury of doing the choosing, shopping among the goods on offer.
Is this choice worth preserving?

Yours faithfully, JUDITH STONE, Regional Secretary, Inner London CASE (Confederarion for the Advancement of State Education) groups.

FELICITY TAYLOR, Chairman,
Camden CASE.

From Mr P. M. Beard

Sir, You say—and it appears to be so—that the Inner London Education Authority are planning (already executing?) their final assault upon the London grammar schools. The answer of these schools should be plain and clear. They should stand firm and not fear to become independent,

As doubts about the quality and character of comprehensives grow the need for an alternative bas never been greater. Indeed the private sector, far from sinking, has never been uoder greater pressure to pro-vide places; and I do not know of a single private school, however described, which does not bave plans for new buildings and the like, readily supported by parents and well-wishers. The grammar schools, in my view, will be similarly supported. No doubt they will go through a difficult time; but they will survive.

Let the socialists do their worst. They cannot go beyond the with-drawal of financial support without drawal of financial support without committing some monstrous act of tyranny. In the longer term it will oot just be parents but the nation itself which will be grateful to the grammar schools if they now show courage—which, as Churchill said, is the sovereign virtue. Yours faithfully,

P. M. BEARD, 42 Bank Street, Sheffield,

The Club of Ten From Mr S. T. Kidd

Sir. The advertisement placed by "The Club of Ten" jo today's issue (June 10) contains the preposterous statement that a Chinese worker in Hongkong doing the same job as a European is normally paid only oneseventieth to one-bundredth of the Europeao's wages. There are no Europeaos employed io manual work in Hongkong. Where Europeans and Chinese do similar jobs—as, for example, in management, the professions, or services —they receive similar salaries.

The statement by "The Club of Ten" is no less absurd if the comparison it attempts to make is be-tween the pay of a Chinese worker in Hongkoog and a European doing the same job in his own couotry. If one takes the average earnings (including overtime) of a skilled worker in Britain as £40 a week, it would meao, according to "The Club of Teo", that a Chinese worker doing the same job receives only between 37p and 40p a week.
In fact, a skilled worker in Hong-king can earn about £25 a week, not counting a traditional bonns of a month's pay at Chinese New Year, and ofteo various fringe beoefits, such as subsidized bousing and meals, and free medical services.

If the point that "The Club of Tan " is trying to make is that Hong-kong workers are sbamefully underpaid, then they should know that wages in Hongkong are the second highest in Asia, after those of Japan.

The absurdity of the statement in the advertisement regarding wages in Hongkong can sale three deals.

in Hongkong can only throw doubt on the credibility, and sincerity, of "The Club of Teo". Yours faithfully,

S. T. KIDD, Commissioner, Hong Kong Government Office, 6 Grafton Street, W1.

The most desirable of the three, and the prize of Mr Horbit's collection, was the first edition of De Revolutionibus Orbium Coelestium, Nuremberg, 1543, which fell to a joint bid of £44,000 from Dawson and the House of El Dief, a temporary transatiantic partnership. This magnificent book was described with some justification by Sotheby's cataloguer as "without donbt the most important copy extant of one of the greatest landmarks in the history of scientific thought.": and its remarkable association with Jeachim Rheticus, Copernicus's own pupil, who aimotated the book before passing it to another member of Copernicus's intimate circle, made the estimates a matter of the wildest conjecture. No copies of the De Revolutionibus inscribed by Copernicus himself are known as he was dujing when the book appeared, and the printing was supervised by Rheticus. The present copy is as close as one is ever likely to get to the great astronomer himself, however. In terms of rarity alone the preceding lot in the sale, a work of 1542 called De Lateribus et Angulis. Triangulorum, which contains the first edition of any part (chapters 13-14 only) of De Revolutionibus, is rarer than the complete edition and brought £7,500 (John Fleming). The third part of this Copernicantic was the second edition of 1556 which had belonged in Henry Briggs and Henry Gellibrand, two distinguished Greekam professors of astronomy. It went to D. F. Brook-Hitching, the London dealer, for £7,000. The first edition of a work by Tycho Brahe, Astronomica Instantaine, 1602, hound with another work by the astronomica, was sold for £3.500 (K. ## Medicine: Prevention of bee-sting alle

Allergies to insect strings are un-common but those who are allergic can suffer severely and even fatally from strings. The recent success of a test made under rather dire circumstances has opened a new avenue to the prevention of such allergic reactions.

Dr L. M. Lichenstein, Dr M. D. Valentine and Anne Sobokta of the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine in Beltimore were faced with the problem of a young boy whose sister had died from a bee sting and who himself had twice become dangerously ill after being stung by a hency bee, the second time despite having conventional therapy beforehand. To make matters worse, his father was second time despite having conrentional therapy beforehand. To make matters worse, his father was a beekeeper and midsummer was approaching. Reasoning that it could not be long before the next sting possibly the sting of death, Dr Lichenstein and lift colleagues meteriook a treatment that had both medical and ethical risks.

The basis of allergy is parallel to that of immunity. On making contact with a foreign substance the body reacts by producing an antihody against it. In immunity the antibody, known as IgG, circulates in the blood plasma and can neutralize the offending substance.
In allergy the subbody, known as IgE, hecomes attached to the surface of white cells in the blood.
When the foreign substance, or allergen, latches on in the IgE it results in the release of chemicals, particularly instrumine, from the white cells. Those chemicals cause inflammation, a fell in blood pressure and closing of the sit passages of the nose.

In sensitive individuals the reaction can be explosive, causing death within minutes. That is particularly likely when the body is injected with a large dose of the allergen, be in penicillin from a doctor's syringe or venom from a bee. The method used to avoid sudden faral allergic reactions is to my to boost the production of IgG in a patient's blood to a level where it can neutralize the allergen before it can latch on to the cell-bound IgE. That is done hy giving a series of injections of small but increasing amounts of the allergen over a period.

For insect-sting allergy an extract of a mixture of mashed-up honey bees, hornets, wasps and vellowatchers is used in the United States. But in Dr. Lichenstein's experience that treatment was seldom successful and certainly not in the case of the besteeper's son. A more rational substance to inject would be the specific venom causing the allergy.

Unfortunately that procedure.

ject would be the specific venom causing the allergy.

Unfortunately that procedure was not allowed under thited States federal regulations and therefore the risk was not known. Despite that, it was decided that the circumstances carranted a trial of injecting honey-hee, remon into the boy. Not only was the consum of his percent obtained, but the father's help was calleded, it was let who collected this venom. ## Hill farmers worried by 'no bulls on the footpath' rule up for a period and became bac tempered.

From John Chartres

Windermere Officials of the National Trust fear a serious breakdown in relations between farmers and tourists, particularly ramblers, because of a recent interpretation of the law affecting footpaths and hulls. Mr Stafford Howard, chairman of

Mr Stattord Howard, chairman of the trust's north-west regional committee, said at a news conference at the Fell Foot country park near Windermere yesterday that a recent report on footpaths by Lord Widgery, the Lord Chief Justice, put the trust and its 67 tenant farmers in the Lake District in a difficult region position. The Lord Chief Justice had said that it was illegal to run a bull more than 12 months old in a field across which there was a footpath, and

The Committee decided that the currencies, which each represent countries which have had an average share of more than 1 per cent in world exports of goods end services in the fiva years 1968 to 1972, should be weighted broadly reflecting their relative importance. This is crucial for the precise valuetion of the SDR, which now can fluctuate in line with exchanga market developments. market developments.

market developments.

The weightings agreed, which amount together to 100 per cent, are as follows in percentages: United States dollar 33 per cent, Deutsche mark 12.5, pound sterling 9, French franc 7.5, yen 7.5, Canadian dollar and lira 6 each guildar 4.5, Belgian franc 3.5, Swedish crown 2.5, Australian, dollar and Danish and Norwegian crowns and peech each 15, and 1 per cent each for the South African rand and the the South African rand and the Austrian schilling.

The interest rate formula is detailed. The starting poim is 5 per cent, which can be changed if interest rate levels rise or fall greatly in the larger countries. The United States, Britain, West Germany, France and Japan will each take a short-term bond in their countries as being representative of national interest rate levels and these five bonds will then be the guide in determining whether great falls or rises in international interest rates have taken place.

The rate levels of the five bonds will be daily compared and should the average level over three months be either above 11 per cent or helow 9 per cent then changes will be made in the 5 per cent initial interest rata set on the SDR. This system will ha reviewed each six mouths by the nternational Monetary Fund.

Should the average rate over three months of the bonds be for example 13 per cent, thus 2 per cent over the 11 per cent guiding limit, then the basic rate of 5 per cent on the SDR will be at the right time with members, whatever they may feel about the arguments now developing about future structure and the increased by three-fifths per cent of the 2 per cent rise. ## Oil rises give Britain its sharpest deterioration in terms of trade

By Melvyn Westiake The most marked deterioration yet suffered by Britain in the terms on which it trades with the rest of the world occurred to February. According to figures finally eleased by the Department of Trade yesterday after several weeks delay, import prices rose nearly three times faster than export prices. The result was a fall of 4.4 per cent in the terms of trade index to 76.5 (1970= 100). This means that Britain must now export a third as much agein as io 1970, to purchase the same level of imports.

The worsening in the terms of trade doring February was exclusively the result of the oil price increases, the full impact of which was being felt during that morning that month. The import unit value index, in fact, rose by 74 per cent to 190.0, while the export unit value index rose just 2.8 per cent to 145.2. But two thirds of cansed by bigher world com-modity and raw material prices. Reuters commodity index, which monitors 17 different materials, reached a peak in the last week of February.

It is not clear how much of the rise in the import price index is attributable to the greater cost of manufactured goods from Britain's indus-trialized competitors who heve also suffered from big raw material price increases. But the figures do confirm that in volume terms Britain's trade position was improving et the beginning of the year. Some 11 per cent more was sold abroad by volume last February compared with a volume in-crease in imports of just over 5 per cent.

This shows more precisely the trend discernible on the monthly trade figure returns that only a small portion of the monthly rise in exports was due to exporters reising their prices.

Accountants in dispute over French operations

A complicated dispute over the right of international firms of accountants to practise in France is causing uncertainty over the future of leading British over the future of leading British firms in Peris.

The operations of tha international firms have been tolerated since the leading French accounting hody, the Ordre des Experts Comptables et des Comptables Agrées, was instituted in 1945 under a law which gave an exclusive right to practice to French nationals who are tice to French nationals who are members of the Ordre.

In recent months, however, there has been growing pressure in the French accounting profession to regulete the rapid growth of the international firms. The Ministry of Finance has accepted that these firms are operating illegally since partnerships are not permitted in nerships are not permitted in France.

But while most of the firms involved have agreed to turn themselves into corporate bodies it is still unclear whether they will obtain special recognition from the Ministry. The Ministry is obliged to refer to the National Council of the Ordre for edvice. Last Friday two representa-tives of the English Institute of Chartered Accountants went to Paris at the invitation of the National Council to discuss the conditions that British firms would have to fulfil in order would have to fulfil in order to obtain favonrable consideration. These proposals ere now being considered. A spokesman for the Euglish Instituta said yesterday that he helieved a solution could ultimately be hammered out. However, there is no guarentee that an agreement with the Netionel Council of the Ordre will be accepted without demur by the powerful Paris Regional Council of the Ordre, which is almost independent of the Netional Council. In France, the regionel councils supervise the ectivities of accounting firms and have access to their hooks of account. The Ministry of Finance has esked foreign firms how they will conform with these super-

Institute said that a disciplinary rates fostered unemployment court of the Regional Council had now decided that Price Weterhouse was not obliged to dispute over the firm had now quietened down and was no longer e live issue.

Earlier this year the French accounting profession made it clear that it was reluctant to sanction authorization for foreign firms unless the British Department of Trade and Indus-try was prepared to permit comptables agrees, the second tier of the Franch accounting profession, to carry out statutory audits in this country.

Experts comptables, the first tier, are already recognized by the DTI.

Mr Healey says plan for IMF to sell gold has widespread support

Glyn's.

Widespread international support now exists for a plan whereby the International Monetary Fund would sell gold on the free markets after having bought gold from central banks, according to Mr Healey, the Chancellor of the Exchequer. Mr Healey said support for this "Witteveen plan" (Dr Johannes Witteveen is managing director of the IMF) will be evident at the ministerial meeting here in the next two days of the Committee of Twenty on international monetary reform.

Mr Healey is the first finance minister at the meeting here to confirm that soch a gold plan exists. He said he is hopeful that the Committee of Twenty OLDING!

If that's the case, Mr Cube would like to change your mind.

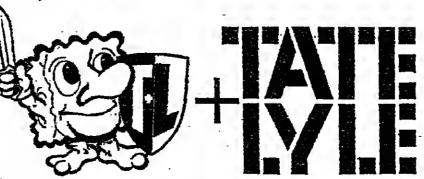

Because Tate & Lyle's shipping, warehousing and distribution, commodity trading, road transport, bulk liquid storage and engineering actually account for more profit than the traditional sugar refining.

Of course, every one of these activities has been a natural development using the skills that come to Mr Cube from growing, buying, transporting, storing, refining and distributing his sugar.

He became an engineer, for example, because of the need first of all to maintain, and then to build,
Tate & Lyle's sugar processing machinery. This expertise expanded and today Mr Cube is not only a major manufacturer and exporter of equipment and systems, but is active in general engineering and even specialised shipbuilding.

You need have no fear, however, that Mr Cube will neglect his sugar duties for the nuts and bolts of engineering.

He will continue on your sugar packets. But his blue print for Tate & Lyle's future means development of all his skills.

The strength and diversity of the Group...

From the Statement by the Chairman, Sir Kenneth Keith

The Strength of the Hill Samuel Group We have benefited substantially from the innate strength, larget capital base and diversity of your Group as it is now comprised. Although it is still sometimes referred to as a merchant banking group, the insurance, shipping and other interests contribute very substantially to Group profits, and Hill Samuel Insurance & Shipping Holdings Limited is itself one of the largest companies in its own spheres

Your Group is now well spread internationally not only in banking, where more than half of its business is done in currencies other than sterling, but also in shipping and insurance services.

record £5,507,000 - 39% up on 1973.

5 Life assurance runds £249 million – 50% up on 1973

Dividend 3.2744p per share net, the maximum

Banking The economic background made it a difficult year. Our activity as foreign exchange dealers, essentially on behalf of our customers, has continued to make an increasing contribution. Our lending in the property sector has been prudent and well secured. Insurance and Shipping

Our insurance companies both in the U.K. and in Australia continued to expand in a satisfactory manner and our insurance broking subsidiaries have also had another very satisfactory year. The improvement in freight markets was sustained for the greater part of the year as a result of which our shipping services have produced much improved earnings. Investment Management

Cautious investment policy helped reduce the impact of falling markets. Seven of the eight unit trusts under HS management performed better than the All-Share Index, some substantially better. The Future

There are so many uncertainties in the economic and political environment both at home and abroad which make forecasting almost impossible. I believe that we are better placed than many and certainly better placed than we were a few years ago to overcome any difficulties, and to compensate for lack of activity due to market conditions in any one of the sectors in which we operate. We do not intend to let the present uncertainties inhibit us from expansion where we believe this should be undertaken, and in particular it remains our objective to expand in the major international centres.

Fenchurch No fresh solution

If the independent board members of Fenchurch Issurance have a rival bidder waiting in the wings, it is high time that they told shareholders. For there is little in their latest riposm to Guinness Pear's improved offer to dissuade them from accepting the hid. Guinness Pear's cash and share package is worth some 43p, with GP at 133p yesterday, indicating an exit p/e, on Penchurch'e profits forecast of 124.

While not overgenorous, this price, in reasonably in line with any rating Fenchurch could expect as an independent group, and possibly more than it could maintain in current markets. Fenchurch does not appear to have any coberent philosophical etance on the merits of an all cash as opposed to a paper bid, how they would cope with the problems that will arise (or continue) if the offer is refused. Already they have devoted considerable time to pointing out the unbappier aspects of GPs influence in Penchurch affairs, particularly the way in which dilution considerations make arquisitious distasteful to the parent company. Until a tresh solution can be found to the problem of control of Fenchurch acceptance of GP's offer looks the only way out.

In the event, profits went shead by a mere 2 per cent in the second half on the back of a 27 per cent seles gain. Yerk-shire certainly had n strong overseas performance in sales terms but the conclusion must be that the for man-made fibres are not commanding the sort of high prices that other chemicals are overseas.

Yorkshire lost some production through the three day week which affected the second half though continuous process status must have belied there though and customer requirements were also reduced during the period. But where, say, ICI, was abin to exploit a similar situation to dramatically beneficial effect by diverting production overseas. Yorkshire had no such good formure.

good fortune.

Meanwhile the raw materials costs spiral continues its up-ward course though at least United Kingdom selling prices were increased in March, just around the end of the financial rear.

The projected £2.75m capital spending this year will probably be around one half financed from cask flow and beyond that will probably call for some long term borrowing. The balance sheet can prebably stand this but the question is whether the new capacity comes on stream before the expected downturn in world chemical demand shows through.

A p/e of 74 may well not be discounting all the uncertainties and n yield of 3.9 per cent is ne prop for the shares.

Bearing in mind that Chamber-lain Phipps's second half took in the three-day week, pre-tax pro-tits growth of 31 per cent for the year, after a hefty increase in financing chargos, looks a creditable performance. More to when viewed against growth of just over a fifth for the group at the interim stage. the interim stage.

The most encouraging feature was a sizable improvement in overseas profits, which contributing £313,000 last year as against £91.000, raised its proportion of the group total from 6 por cent to 16 per cent.

Meanwhile the major shoe components division raised its profits from £0.85m to just on the £1m mark during a year that was not a notably good one for shoe manufacturers, which indi-shoe manufacturers, which indicates some recovery in the moulding division following a sharp fall in its 1972-73 contribution. The general industries division contributing Z8 per cent of group profits saw a marginal improvement. Order books are running at reasonably good levels in the opening months of the current year, and the situation has eesed over raw material supplies. But one surprising feature of the latest results le the relativoly dall prafits performance in export markets, which contributed some 10 per cent to overall

The group is making some en-couraging noises about the cur-rent year but it should be re-membered that despite its succeas in spreading trading risks ootside footwear manufacturing, nearly half its profits come from that area. There appears to he some speculative element in the

Why the stores are slimming down

The Burton group, as herelded in its interim report last month, is taking drastic scripu to reduce losses in its Peter Robinson department store division. A programme to close down most of the larger regional stores built on unprofitably generous scales is well under way. During the past few months the Peter Robinson chain has been slashed from 22 stores to been slashed from 22 stores to almost daily. The Top Shop of which have been trading have been placed under separate management and this chain is to develop independently. The only store to continue to combine both names will be the recently refurbished Oxford

Many of the surplus stores have been sold at prices well over the 1972 valuation figures, according to Burton's joint chairmen Mr Raymond Burton and Mr Ladislas Rice. Two branches have been handed over to Browns of Chester, n depart-

The same session of the Assembly also resolved to establish a special fund under the auspices of the United Nations and supported by voluntary contributions, to provide emorgency relief. It is supposed to stert operating not the latest by January 1, 1975. In addition, it was decided to set up a 36-member ad hoc committee to monitor and assess the progress of the whole special programme, and make ment store group acquired by Burton in 1961. One, at Norwich, is, being converted into a type of Burton's emporium with five divisions represented - Peter Robinson, Top Shop, Orango Hand, Ryman end Jackson the

The decision by the Burton group to replace so many of its Peter Robinson stores with much smaller fashion boutiques will come as no surprise to other department store traders, All the companies have had to juggle with the difficulties of balancing turnover with new and sometimes inflated property Burton's Peter Robinson division's problems became publicly apparent in 1971 when the parent company charged the division economic rent on its properties. In the year to August, 1971, the division made e loss of £35,000. The 1973 annual report revealed that losses had increased to 5227,000 after charging a market rent of £528,000. This, however, was partially due to action on behalf of a new management ream to lished, the Top Shop young fashion sub-division is described as highly profitable. This, 100, is well recognized by the main department store operators such as Sears Holdings, which bas been rapidly expanding its Miss Seltridge chain separately from its main stores. The House of Fraser has taken a similar course of action with its Way In bou-tiques which originated in

In line with the general trend, Burton has been steadily deve-loping Top Shaps within estab-lished Peter Rohinson stores. However, unlikn the others, the group seemed to be unable to achieve the right mixture of new and old.
While the growth of new young-fashion chains is considered an important area for the future development of department stores es a whole, it is by no means the only oce. There appear to be at least four broad paths of develop-preparo, it was said, for future growth.

Although no figures am published, the Top Shop young fashion sub-division is described Somo of the smeller groups such as Bentall's of Kingston have proved such a formula can continue to work.

Alternatively, they can join the fast developing discount traders, or other sectors of retail trade, as the John Lowis Partnership has done with its Weitroso grocory chain. Or they can move out of town and set up smaller hranches close in residential areas. Finally they can invest outside the retail trade altogether.

In practice, most of the big groups have used a combination of these methods. Debenhams, which numorically is the largest of the department storn groups, has a declared policy to diversify into related retailing

As part of this policy it acquired Cater Bros (Provisions), a chain of food supermerkets and off-licences last rapidly as planning permissions will allow into hypermarkottype development under the Scan name. Two of these new stores have alroady been coponed, at Walkden neer Manchester and at the Vicenia chester and at the Victoria Centre in Nottingham. Planning epplications have been made for another two.

The House of Fraser which vies with Dehenhams for the title of department stores martitle of department stores mar-ket leader, has also studied the possibilities of out-of-town hypormarkots. However, it is helieved to have shelved the idee without a suitable partner experienced in food retailing and in view of the restrictions on obtaining planning permis-sion

The House of Fraser eeems to have set its sights for store development largely in Europe, a policy which led to the unsuccessful takeover negotiations with Boots, which hae a similar aim. This group has also developed in other ways by capitalizing on the value of its sites. Patricia Tisdall has been giving consideration to the Community's cootriburecommendations to development ministers from the Nine when they meet in Luxembourg on Thursday. A World Bank study of 40 developing countries suggests that they need an extra $6,000m this year to pay for the same lovel of oil imports ss in 1973 only a third of which they will he able to cover by drawing on their official reserves or using International Monetary Fund

Special Drawing Rights.
World Bank estimates also indicate that the developing countries as a whole spont some $5,200m on oil last year and will need $14,900m for the same volumn of oil imports this year. Indeed, if oil prices remain at present levels, the current account deficits of the developing countries, excluding the oil-producing states, could reech well over $20,000m in aggregate, roughly double the anouel deficit of recent years.

search depertment calculates that many poorer states are facing probable increases in their import hill for basic foods comparable to the increasn in their outleys for oil. Food grain imports into non-oil exporting Third World countries could possibly reach $8,000m-9,000m in 1974. This is 20 per cent higher than in 1973 (when the extra food costs started to appear) but three times greater than in 1972 when the grain import bill amounted 10 Grains are the lergest cate-

More recently, discussion bas centred on an aggregate target of $3,000m, made up of $500m each from the EEC and the United States; $500m from other developed netions and $1,500m from the rile producers. Other food costs have also risen. Despite their predomi-namly agricultural character, many developing countries (ex-cluding oil producers) have, over the past two decedes, moved from e position of approximate self-sufficiency in grains, in aggregate, to one of considerable dependence, particularly on North America. Food imports by the developing countries are accounting for a growing share of their total imports. This iocreased food import hill is absorbing an ever larger share of export narnings and will offset a significant pert of the gains made from the recent unprecedented commodity beam

Even this projected deficit could prove to he a serious underestimate. The IMF resharply as transportation cape-city became strained to 1973. This helped to push up import uoit values. The rise in oil prices will further raise freight cherges, and thus the landed cost of imports.

In addition, against a background of food shorteges. a deficiency in the supply of chemical fertilizer raises the spectre of n setback to form crops in developing countries at a time when food shortages ere already heing suffered. Imports of fertilizer by developing coun-tries represent 35 to 40 per cent of world trade in these products. Their ferrilizer import hill (including raw materials) rose from $550m in 1970 to about $1,000m in 1973.

At current price levels expenditure this year could rise to $1,800m, despite considerable import cutbacks. Oil price iocreases, a lack of world productivo capacity and the increased emphasis in recent years on conscious and development have egricultural development havn all helped to drive up prices.

These facts illustrate the awesome magnitude of the problem that the United Nations emergency operation will bave to deal with. Yet, thore is concern lest even the inadequato programme now proposed should not be fully supported. It now seems possible that some of the Muslim oil Developing countries other than oil exporters, had to import 37 million toos of wheat exporters would rather channol their aid through an Islamic agency, Arab-African and Araband rice in 1973, some 50 per cent more than in preceding yeers. constructed by Dr Johannea Witteveen, maoaging director of the IMF. This facility was initially intunded largely to cater for the requirements of those industrialized countries worst affected by oil price in-creases. But the $3,000m raised by Dr Witteveen is absurdly inadequate for the needs of the rich states who require between $50,000m and As a consequence, the oil facility may now be eer-marked for the use of tha developing countries. Additionally, the Council for Davelopment Aid (one of the two new bodies expected to succoed the Committee of Twenty when it is wound up this week) will no doubt also he forced to concentrate on the immediate crisis,

Meanwhile, the World Bank, which more normally providea finance for the devoloping oations, has also heen husily trying to attract the oil exporters' surplus cash, by selling them long-term hank honds. Early last month, it was revealed that World Bank borrowings from the Middle East and

Venezuela were nearly $675m. These efforts of the Inter-national agencies, both individ-ually and collectively within the framework of the UN emergency programme, have new got the rescue operation into first gear. But top speed will be necessary to prevent the prob-lems of the Indian sub-continent, tropical Africa, the Carib-heao and parts of Latin heao and parts of Latin America making the difficulties of Italy and other European the Arah eye. countries appear insignificant Many of the oil exporters by comparison. Tyndall will take shareholdings in any UK quoted company in exchange for the Tyndall 3-way Fund or by Tyndail. The exchange will cost you considerably less in expenses than if you sold shares yourself to invest elsewhere. And at present low prices, you could also save on capital gains tax.

any other investment managed

In the Tyndall 3-way Fund your investment is spread over equities, property and fixedinterest so providing greater stability and a broader investment base. For details, please contact:
